

TOP DEFENCE FOR MUNRO

OTTAWA (EP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister John Turner both intervened Tuesday in an effort to discourage intense opposition questioning of Labor Minister John Munro.

Allan Lawrence asked if Munro had received any indication whether or not he will be called as a witness in the criminal trial involving the Hamilton Harbors Board.

Before the Labor Minister could answer, Prime Minister Trudeau said Munro was not being asked questions relating to administration of his department.

Speaker James Jerome ruled, however, that the questions did relate to Munro's ministerial capacity.

At this point Turner insisted that if Lawrence was going to ask questions based on newspaper reports then he must put his seat on the line.

Again the Speaker ruled that the question was acceptable.

$ Hits Record Lows

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar slid to record lows in some European centres today amid continued uncertainty over the future role of the American currency in world oil trade.

The dollar closed at all-time lows in Brussels, Oslo and Zurich and was fixed in Frankfurt one pfennig above its record low in relation to the West German mark.

Meanwhile in Vienna the 12-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) hinted Tuesday night that the declining value of the U.S. dollar might cause it to change its present system of calculating oil prices in a way that would mean higher costs for consumers.

This hint was given by Jamshid Amouzegar, Iran's interior minister and chief delegate to OPEC, following a meeting here of oil ministers from the countries that jointly produce 85 per cent of the world's export petroleum.

In one of the cryptic and seemingly contradictory statements that are characteristic of the way in which OPEC does business, Amouzegar first said that the price set for crude oil in December — one that now has a barrel of crude selling at slightly less than $11 — would remain fixed through the first nine months of this year.

Then, in the next breath, Amouzegar attached a big "if" to that statement by saying: "Now a new subject has come up, and that is the sharp decline in the dollar. This is an entirely new subject, and we're going to have to discuss it."

Bank of B.C. Revenue Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of B.C. has reported balance of revenue after tax of $252,835 for the three months ended Jan. 31, up 70 per cent from $147,572 in the first quarter of fiscal 1974.

Total revenue for the quarter was $15.9 million compared with $8.3 million last year.

The bank recently issued 255,277 shares under a rights offering, increasing the number of outstanding shares to 765,832.

FOOD SHORTAGE AT CITY MARINE BASE? PSAC Strikes Expanding

GEIGER COUNTER is used by Ontario health ministry official conducting radiation check on Ottawa office building.

Radiation Check Planned

A provincial inspector will arrive in Victoria later today or Thursday morning to check out a local building for any lingering radiation hazard from work formerly done there with luminous paint.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, declined today to reveal which building is involved but said "it appears unlikely there is any cause for concern."

He said the building is not now being used for work with luminous paint. The radiation threat appears to be where such paint was manufactured, and sometimes spilled, he said, and that was not the work done locally.

The Victoria site is one of four buildings in British Columbia being checked for possible radiation, an official of the provincial occupational health branch said from Vancouver today.

John H. Smith refused to identify the buildings but said two are in Vancouver, one is in Victoria and the fourth is in the Okanagan community of Armstrong. A number of buildings are also being checked in Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

The hazard from luminous paint comes where it contains radium which gives off radiation known to cause cancer.

The radiation inspections were ordered after radiation levels up to 800 times safety limits were found on the third floor of a Toronto building.

Times News Services

More than 2,000 striking federal workers massed on Parliament Hill this morning as strike action was stepped up across the country to get federal government negotiators back to the bargaining table.

The demonstrating workers were to continue their protests all day, spokesmen said. The workers carried placards while circling in front of the Centre Block and chanting.

Almost all the 2,500 labor and trades workers in the Ottawa area and 500 mint employees were out today as the Public Service Alliance of Canada began to escalate its series of revolving strikes now in their 10th day.

Meanwhile, blue-collar workers of the general labor and trades group, represented by the PSAC, resumed picket lines outside Toronto post office entrances today, ending a 36-hour truce initiated to sort and deliver government social assistance cheques.

In Victoria, crews aboard the Ministry of Transport vessels which dock at the marine services base on Harbour Road could find themselves running low on food if the picket line around the base continues.

The picket line was set up at the base today for the fifth time since the series of rotating strikes started last week.

PSAC members designated as essential to safety and security and ship crew members reported for work this morning before the picket line was set up, but marine services district manager Larry Slaght reported that commercial trucks delivering both food and maintenance supplies have not been crossing the picket line.

Slaght said there are still enough food stores "to last for awhile, but the working stores would be exhausted" during any long-term dispute.

PSAC picket lines also went up today at Dockyard, Naden, Royal Roads, Telmont Park housing subdivision, Rocky Point ammunition magazine and Ogden Point grain elevator.

Members of the Dockyard, Trades and Labor Council, employed in ship repair work at Dockyard, had earlier refused to cross the PSAC picket line, but did report for work this morning.

An armed forces spokesman said there was no great dispute involving a larger group of federal employees.

OTTAWA — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's speaking engagements for the next two months have been cancelled including an address to the Canadian Club in Germany. Cancellation was made on the advice of his attending physicians.

Mint Talks Resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Royal Canadian Mint and union negotiators were talking again Tuesday but spokesmen on both sides feel the strike, now in its seventh week, may not be over until the end of a dispute involving a larger group of federal employees.

Record Days Lost

OTTAWA (CP) — The labor force lost more than nine million man days because of work stoppages in 1974, the labor department said today. A record total of 9,255,120 man days were lost in 1,216 work stoppages involving 592,220 employees, the department said in a news release.

Laos Bans Hippies

VIENTIANE (AP) — Persons classed as hippies will no longer be allowed to enter Laos, the prime minister's office announced here Wednesday.

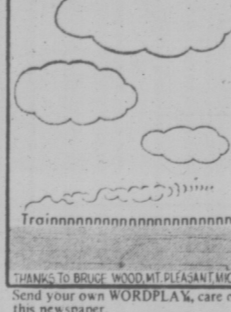

The spokesman remarked, however, that it was difficult to tie a hippie if he "put on a tie to ask for his visa."

Some Victoria businessmen are supplying "loans" to young heroin addicts to purchase drugs in Vancouver, a Victoria woman charged Tuesday.

Carol Haley, president of the Victoria Drug-Concerned Society told a Senate committee in Ottawa the businessmen were using "heavies" to collect their loans and were getting away free because there is nothing illegal in lending money.

"The real criminals are the men who put up the money," she said.

A Victoria police spokesman said today though police have no knowledge of the loan-sharking operation alluded to in Haley's remarks, it could be going on.

"Perhaps she has some information we don't have," Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart said.

Haley, of 1817 Newton, was testifying before a committee studying a bill that would lighten penalties for marijuana use.

She said addicts were unanimously opposed to legalizing marijuana and hashish saying they all started with using "soft" drugs.

The mother of five said her oldest son, age 21, was a heroin addict and had started taking drugs at 14, progressing from glue-sniffing to marijuana.

Hempsall Resigns

Leslie Hempsall, associate deputy minister of economic development, has resigned from the provincial government.

In an interview today, Hempsall said he resigned last week in order to go into the consulting business on his own.

Hempsall, 54, was appointed deputy minister of the department in January 1972 under the Social Credit government but was designated associate deputy last year.

Asked if his resignation had anything to do with the "lateral shift," Hempsall said: "Well, it was a downward shift but it had nothing to do with this."

"I was in industry before and now I've had three and a half years in government so now I have enough experience on both sides to go it on my own. I got what I wanted out of it," he said.

Looters by the Hundred Stripped Derailed Freight

THUNDER BAY (CP) — A CNR freight train was looted of flour, fruit and clothing believed to be worth nearly $1 million after it went off the tracks 150 miles east of here two weeks ago, according to the Times-News.

The newspaper says numerous bags of mail and parcel post are also missing, and postmasters in two northern Ontario centres have reported empty mail bags found miles from the derailed train.

The newspaper says the goods were carried off over a nine-day period with the estimated participation of nearly 1,000 people. No cause has been determined for the derailment which occurred early Feb. 9.

The eastbound train left the tracks 17 miles east of Longlac, turning over nine carloads of dressed beef, seven cars of dry goods, two mail cars, two cars of fruit and one car containing horses and hogs.

Two express cars and one car-carrying two automobiles were also hurled into the bush and snow, and the wreckage splattered over hundreds of yards — was a twisted nightmare when CNR special agent George Root arrived.

"He found cars laid on their sides, meat on the ground, horses and hogs dying in the wreckage. Hundreds of crates of fruit had been scattered and thousands of pieces of mail had been hurled in every direction.

The crash scene is five miles from the nearest road and, as word of the rail wreckage spread, people began to trickle into the site.

Then, said Root, "it spread like wildfire" with as many as 200 people a day making their way through the bush to raid the rail cars almost at will. Many of the looters came by snowmobile.

Root's call for help brought another CNR official and two Ontario Provincial Police officers from Longlac. Later two other OPP officers from the town of Geraldton came in as relief, but the looting went on.

"People were coming from all over creation — Caramat, Longlac, Kapuskasing, Geraldton — I have never seen anything like it," said Root, who guarded the cars for nine days.

"We tried to keep them away from the train for their own safety. We tried to talk them away. We were running up and down the length of the train trying to keep people away."

"They wouldn't listen to us, they just wanted the meat," Gilbert Ferris, CNR trainmaster at Longlac, at one time saw about a hundred people going through the overturned train cars. "It was a terrible situation. We were not able to control it at all. People wouldn't listen."

He said he did not know of anyone being charged with theft or trespassing.

Another railwayman said it would be difficult to bring a charge of theft that might involve most of the people in a town.

"The jury might smile a lot," he said.

Gov't Department For Women Only

A new government branch to deal solely with the participation of women in the economy was announced Tuesday by Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk.

The "women's economic rights branch" has been established to "examine, plan and recommend on all issues affecting the economic rights of women in B.C."

Laik said he was not suggesting the branch was any total answer to the problems of women but it is a "little modest start" to getting women into the business community and the boardrooms of the province.

The projects of the new branch will be a statistical publication on women in B.C. and "the monitoring of affirmative action on women's participation within the department of economic development."

Through the branch "women will now have a base from which to influence the economic planning and the quality of life in this province," he said.

The branch will be consulted to ensure the viewpoint of women is taken into account in all departmental policies and programs, and to ensure the provision of support and advice for women in business.

When women try to put the principles of equality into practice their demands are met with "disbelief, resistance and sometimes outright rejection," he said.

"It is now up to all institutions both in the government and the private sector to meet this challenge," said Laik.

Eileen Caner, a career public servant, will head up the branch, he said, and has already begun her work.

Laik described Caner as a dedicated and highly qualified civil servant who was working at the lowest level within the department with no opportunity for advancement before the NDP took office. Time after time she was passed up for promotion, he said.

The branch will be staffed by a team of people with backgrounds in economics, statistics, sociology, commerce and related fields and with a history of involvement in the women's movement of B.C.

Premier Barrett has resisted demands by women's groups to form a separate department for women.

Ottawa Offers Tips on Saving

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government opened an advertising campaign to plug energy conservation Tuesday, rapping Canadians for being energy gluttons and urging them to cut down consumption.

In the first of a series of nine full-page newspaper advertisements, the government puts itself on the back for efforts to cut down its own energy bills and suggests homeowners also look for ways to save.

"The savings can be achieved simply," the ads say. "Turn off the television set when your show is over.

Walk to the corner store. Take the public transit to work.

"Keep your furnace clean. Insulate your home. Weather-strip doors and windows. You can save from $50 to $100 right there — plus, the energy."

Further tips are promised in future ads.

The $1.3 million advertising program, outlined earlier this month by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, is aimed at shaving two per cent off consumption this year, a saving of about $1 billion.

Television and radio ads as well as pamphlets also are planned.

The first of the ads carried words of encouragement from Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister John Turner and Macdonald.

Macdonald said conservation now is an important part of the government's over-all energy program, adding it is a permanent plan "not a contingency plan enacted in a crisis."

The country now is second only to the United States in per capita consumption of energy and without conservation demand for energy will double in 12 years.

The ad says the government already has taken steps "to put its own house in order," pointing out that in one year the national defence department saved $1 million in fuel bills by lowering building temperatures to 68 during the day and 65 at night.

To cynics who noted that despite the conservation program, many thermostats in government offices still are set at between 75 and 78 degrees, the public works department has an answer.

"You might see a thermostat set at 75 degrees, but the occupant isn't getting that heat because the thermostats are set between 68 and 70 degrees at a central point and that's all the heat going through the offices," said a department spokesman in an interview.

He adds that between February and November last year, the government buildings in Ottawa used 2.8 million less gallons of fuel than in 1973, a saving of about $671,000.

Retro Pay Given Barrett, Cabinet

Provincial cabinet ministers received retroactive pay amounting to more than $1,000 during the last fiscal year.

Public accounts figures made public recently reveal Premier Barrett received $29,247, in his role as premier in the 1973-74 fiscal year, instead of the statutory salary of $28,000.

Most cabinet ministers received $25,002 instead of $24,000.

Deputy finance minister Gerry Bryson today cleared up the confusion, which had even the premier wondering if he had been paid too much by mistake.

Ministers and MLAs were given a pay increase during the spring session of 1973 and the increases approved April 18, were retroactive to Jan. 1, 1973.

Thus public accounts figures included retroactive pay for the period between January and April.

MLAs did not receive any retroactive amount because, at that time, their salaries were raised to $12,000 per session and thus they were not paid on a yearly basis.

Further changes in legislation in the spring of 1974 established yearly salaries for all MLAs and set that amount at $24,000 a year with cabinet ministers earning a total of $48,000 and the premier receiving $52,000.

juana, then on to chemicals and hard drugs.

However, she said, not all marijuana users go on to heroin. Of her son's group only about 50 per cent did, she said, and she didn't know why.

She charged marijuana introduces children, often at the elementary school age, to the drug scene and eventually to the whole criminal subculture.

She was critical of the lack of rehabilitation facilities for drug users and addicts in B.C.

She said because there is no rehabilitation in prisons, parents do not turn in their children when drug use starts.

Haley testified parents often were forced to subsidize their children's habit to get them into the only government-sponsored program available for addicts in the province, the methadone treatment program run by the Drug and Alcohol Commission.

To get into the program addicts must show through urine tests they are using heroin for five successive days.

"How can kids do this at a cost of $45 to $50 a cap."

The answer for most concerned parents, she said, was to subsidize their children's habit for a week. But parents find this distasteful because it involves them indirectly in the heroin traffic. The children do the actual buying.

Haley also confirmed what RCMP officers told the committee earlier this month — that police use discretion in laying charges for drug use.

CHARRED ROOF and cinders are all that remain of a double-width mobile home which caught fire at 5:30 a.m. today in the 4700-block Sooke Road. Owner and occupant Harold Bjornsen was alone at the time. He tried to phone firemen but flames forced him outside and he had to run half a mile to a neighbor to turn in the alarm. By the time the Metchison volunteer fire department arrived the home was engulfed. Fire Chief Herman Volk said the fire started near an oil furnace. Damage was estimated at $28,000. (Keith Vesey Photo)

VIOLIN VIRTUOSO CONFINED TO BED

Christian Farras, French violin virtuoso who was to have been Victoria Symphony guest artist at last Sunday-Monday concerts, is confined to hospital here and will be for at least two weeks.

His illness caused maestro Laszlo Gati to call Canadian violinist Steven Staryk from Vancouver at two hours' notice to fill the vacant guest spot.

Staryk was flown from Vancouver in a small plane Sunday morning and performed the Mendelssohn violin concerto with the orchestra at both concerts with brilliant success although he had not looked at the score for almost a year.

GAME DELAYED

He said the union handout accused the city of employing "scab labor" to meet major hockey commitments such as Tuesday night's fixture.

"There is no scab labor working in the arena," Anderson said. "They are management or part-time people who are on call as they always have been."

As for the union claiming children were being "deprived" of sports opportunities, he said it was ironic that statement should appear on the day when school district janitors' picketing had started depriving thousands of students of their normal education.

Meanwhile, Victoria teachers continue to be part of a contingency plan evolved by the school board to provide one hour a day of classroom instruction to children, mainly to deal with homework assignments.

Greater Victoria Teachers Association president Mavis De Girolamo met Tuesday with representatives of both CUPE school locals and said after that the position of teachers is unchanged from a decision of the membership in January.

There were indications today there may be another meeting of GVTA shortly, and spokesmen from Locals 382 and 947 have been invited.

Bob Cunningham, vice-president of Local 382, said today there is a feeling among some teachers that there should be more "direction" from their association to "bring the matter to a head."

He said there was to be discussion between the GVTA executive and B.C. Teachers Federation on the subject of support and communication between the parties.

Although teachers cross picket lines daily, they do not do work normally done by staff belonging to the other unions.

School board community relations officer Bill Stavdal said a legal opinion has been sought over CUPE picketing of the district's new $3.6 million Spectrum School construction site; where excavation and foundation work is halted. He pointed out there are no CUPE jobs involved at that location.

In another strike development, Fire Chief Eric Simmons through Public Works Minister Bill Hartley, ordered the removal of stored garbage from the legislative buildings because of the fire hazard. It was expected CUPE would agree to it being moved to safer storage on parking lots.

disruption at any DND operations.

In Halifax, about 200 workers walked off jobs today at one of the country's largest defence establishments, including Maritime command headquarters, the naval armament, the former Stadacona naval base and the naval dockyards.

In Winnipeg, workers set up picket lines at the city's main post office and all substations. But most letter carriers crossed the lines and reported for work.

In Toronto a PSAC spokesman said it took workers only 24 hours to sort the some 1.5 million social assistance cheques not the 60 hours the post office said it would take.

"The post office claimed to need 60 hours to get the cheques out," said the spokesman. "Now we find that in 24 hours they've been able to get the cheques out, and other mail as well."

In Montreal, maintenance workers returned to their jobs today at Montreal International Airport but the airport in Quebec City remained closed.

In Vancouver, fifty grain inspectors and clerical staff PSAC members who were told by the Canadian Grain Commission not to come to work last Friday are petitioning the federal government for severance pay.

The workers received the layoff notice as grain exports were halted by the striking GLT workers.

About 282 union employees have been laid off since grain samplers and weighers for the GLT walked off the job last week at the city's five grain elevators.

Gerry Andringa, vice-president of Local 60 and one of the grain inspectors, said the government was avoiding the term "layoff" in its handling of the situation.

"Our employer told us not to report for duty last Friday, told us we're subject to instant recall, and that our income was terminated."

"Many of us have 15 to 25 years of service with the government, yet some of us received less than one hour's layoff notice," he said.

the weather

Temperatures dropped to near zero last night in some inland valleys as a ridge of high pressure maintained clear skies. In contrast the coast was cloudy and readings ranged from the low 30s near Georgia Strait to 50 over the windy outer coast. A weather system is moving over the province from the Pacific today with some rain along the coast and a few widely scattered showers or snow flurries in the interior. Thursday's weather at the moment looks like rain and strong winds in coastal areas with increasing clouds in the Cariboo but mainly sunny in the Okanagan and Kootenay valleys.

SIGN OF THE TIMES over the next several months will be the gradual removal of large boardings like this radio station billboard near the Colony Hotel on Douglas. The city-imposed ban on "third party" signs — advertising goods and services not available at the site in question — and rooftop advertising allowed a three-year phasing out period which expires next August. Bayliss Sign Ltd. is well inside the deadline in taking down this one. (Bill Halkett photo)

Files 'Not Confidential'

There is no reference to confidentiality in the minutes of a former B.C. Hydro committee on the Columbia River treaty project costs, former Hydro chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside said Tuesday.

Keenleyside said only the title page of the minutes released Friday by Resources Minister Bob Williams bears the word "confidential."

And, without revealing the source of his information, he said he has been told that the first page of the documents was typed by a machine unlike those used by Hydro.

But he said he does not plan to carry out his own investigation of the alleged typing differences.

Noting that the page marked confidential had no file number on it, Keenleyside said: "If it was paper taken out of a Hydro file it would have had a file number on it. This was the rule in Hydro.

"I'm not saying that the rule was never broken, only that all files were numbered."

Keenleyside claimed the absence of any confidential tag in the main body of the minutes supports his contention that meetings of the special committee set up to look at reallocation of treaty costs were never intended to be kept secret.

The essential fact, he added, is that "in all these minutes in B.C. Hydro files, none of them had 'confidential' marked on. It would be very interesting to know who put the confidential on the sheet, when and why."

However, Keenleyside denied he himself was making any allegations concerning the insertion of the word, because "I don't know anything about it."

Earlier this week in the legislature, Pat McGeer (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) also noted that only the cover sheet was marked confidential, while that label was not included in the minutes themselves.

But Resources Minister Williams, questioned outside the House, said the clear implication was that the entire file was confidential.

Williams agreed only the cover page bore the word confidential, but said the minutes had been taken from a bound file on which the cover was clearly marked confidential.

McGeer also referred to a press release issued by the premier's office dated Feb. 21, 1975, which includes an item headed "Hydro Committee Tried to Hide Columbia River Treaty Costs."

The item described the minister's tabling of copies of the committee's correspondence, but contains nothing in the way of documentary proof to show that all committee meetings were in fact confidential.

McGeer said the former Social Credit administration had reasons for wanting to hide costs, but no such evidence has been produced.

'A Boat With Wheels'

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — A boat manufacturing firm in this southeastern Saskatchewan community is developing a pleasure boat which can run on land.

Frank Reitze, general manager of Prairie Boating Ltd., said the prototype of the 36-foot boat should be completed for land and water testing this summer.

The vehicle, driven by a 440-cubic-inch engine, has three axles and retractable wheels, he said. Top land speed is estimated at 90 miles an hour with a possible water speed of 25 miles an hour.

The company, owned by 43 shareholders from the Weyburn area, has budgeted $50,000 for the prototype and Reitze said he expects the vehicle will sell for about $35,000 when in full production.

He said the vehicle will have a standard transmission and a transfer transmission which will enable the operator to use combinations of the three axles, necessary to meet government weight restrictions on highways.

The company hopes to employ about 30 people after one year of production, Reitze added.

The vehicle is described as simply a boat with wheels.

Weather Web Closing On 'Renegade' Ship

Times News Services

QUEBEC CITY — The renegade ship Atlantean, with its bearded captain at the helm leading a crew of teen-agers, bobbed helplessly in the ice-clogged St. Lawrence River today.

The dash toward open sea, beyond the reach of its new owner failing and the coast guard under orders to seize the ship at the first opportunity.

"There is no way they can make it across the gulf to open sea," the coast guard said Tuesday night.

"It would be impossible for a ship that light to pass through the thick ice on the gulf. We have three ice-breakers out there and even they are having problems. That ship is totally blocked."

Jacques Bouchard, a lawyer for fugitive skipper Brian Erb, said in an interview the vessel, with a crew of 10 men and eight women, was headed for the Bahamas via Boston.

Erb was armed and would resist arrest, he added.

RCMP officials said they plan no action against the fleeing ship because the case comes under Quebec Provincial Police jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Paul Emile Caron, the ship's new owner, described the vessel as unseaworthy.

The coast guard official said there was no urgency in taking the ship since it was in no danger from the ice unless those on board leave the freighter and try to cross the ice on foot.

Pretty Thin Stuff

Almost as interesting as the actual matters at issue in the current controversy over whether or not some of the costs of the Columbia River project were juggled or re-allocated or disguised is speculation about the motives of Lands and Forests Minister Robert Williams and Premier Dave Barrett.

The man who tabled in the legislature memoranda which he claimed were proof that such a cover-up took place, Williams is no dummy. In the past he's usually documented his cases very carefully, and any charges he made were based on strong evidence.

Unless he has more secret memoranda, the sinister motives he seemed to attach by innuendo to the existence of the committee don't seem justified by the evidence he's made public so far. He seems to have realized this himself. Last Thursday, a day before he tabled the secret memoranda, he said in the legislature that "yes, there was a secret committee of senior officials within B.C. Hydro that worked over a period of two years on the question of re-allocating costs . . ."

The same day outside the house, he told one newspaper a secret committee "deliberately" camouflaged costs, and that there was "a committee meeting regularly to change cost patterns." And the premier's office issued a press release which asserted "Hydro committee tried to hide Columbia River treaty costs."

These are definitely serious charges. But the next day at a press conference, Williams said he had no evidence that costs actually were re-allocated or that the committee actually made recommendations to the government concerning the same. Williams seems to be backtracking a fair bit from what he first said.

It's a small point, but nonetheless important if we are to make sense out of the confusing semantic welter of charges and counter-charges, whether the committee was "secret" (the dictionary defines the word "to be kept private, not to be made known or exposed to view") or not, or actually had authority to act.

What is more interesting, perhaps, is the opposition's belief that this affair is the opening shot in the New Democratic Party re-election campaign. Supposedly, the "revelations" about the Columbia River project will be followed by more dirty linen on the Pacific Great Eastern railway, now the British Columbia Railway, when Social Credit was in office, and on other government operations during the Bennett years.

The idea probably is to totally discredit the official opposition as a possible alternative to the NDP as the government in B.C. If the NDP isn't careful, the attempt could backfire and explode in the government's face. Despite what Watergate showed in the U.S., there doesn't seem to be much advantage in scandal-mongering in Canadian politics, even if the scandals are true.

Take the Sommers affair of the 1950s as a good B.C. example. Despite the conviction and incarceration of the former lands and forests minister the Bennett administration didn't suffer visibly at the polls. And that involved personal impropriety, a government minister on the take.

In the current controversy concerning the Columbia, there's not even the breath of a suggestion that anyone in a position of authority made an illegal dollar. Williams et al are simply arguing politics, whether in hindsight almost a decade later that this or that policy should have been followed. To the average voter it's going to appear as pretty thin stuff.

Tory Plays His One-Man Band

It has been said of Dr. Scott Wallace that everybody can afford to like him because there is only one of him.

This is a cynical description, brought on, in part, because the Oak Bay MLA and Conservative leader appeals to old fashioned values: to wit honesty, candor and graciousness. Things that sound sentimental or even lugubrious to 20th century minds conditioned to political ritual in this post Watergate era.

But the doughty Wallace doesn't seem to care as he continues to play his one-man band in the legislature as though 30 snarling Tories sat at his back, rather than being a lone figure squeezed between the overflow NDP benches and Liberals.

On Tuesday he took up where he left off Monday replying to the Speech from the Throne. During the two day course in his 32 page speech he castigated both Social Credit and NDP while at the same time praising some of the government's measures.

Scottish Burr

In the ringing tones of indignation that only a Scottish burr can convey he said, "This province wants neither the economic and social imprisonment by the radical left; nor the wholesale wide open economic license, or the repressive social neglect of the reactionary right."

The last 23 years of British Columbian government contradicted Wallace, but he says it with the conviction of a Presbyterian minister who has God on his side.

Usually the opposition's ritualistic replies to the Throne Speech are confined to upbraiding the government, either for what it has done or what it didn't do. But in typically iconoclastic fashion Wallace used his time for a free swinging attack on all things he despises, not least of which is the Social Credit official opposition.

"What will never be forgiven this present government, by that majority of moderate, fair minded citizens of B.C. . . . is if this NDP party proves to be so mired in its mismanagement . . . that it allows the dark ages of Social Credit to be brought back into British Columbia once again, that it allows the power hungry Social Credit to take office by default."

One gets the feeling listening to Wallace that if the NDP would quit mucking into Social Credit solution with the sweetish affinity of ginger ale for rye.

But he weathered that storm. And Tuesday he departed from his prepared speech to deliver the most perceptive analysis that has yet surfaced on the memoranda concerning a Hydro committee which discussed reallocation of costs on the dam projects resulting from the Columbia River treaty.

As the Hon. member from Oak Bay pointed out, it is irrelevant whether or not a secret committee existed. The fact remains a committee was formed and some measure of deception, as to the reallocation of public funds, was being discussed.

Stunning Articulation

That a crown corporation would even form such a committee to discuss reallocation costs to enhance its public image grates on Wallace, as it should all citizens.

He then asked, did the committee take its recommendations to the Social Credit government and, if so, what did the government of the day do with them?

Following this enunciation of the issues, in typical Wallace fashion, he apologized to the house, and Committee Chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside for his use of the word "Watergate" in connection with the Columbia River deal in an earlier speech.

Yet it was a stunning articulation of the issues in a political case that has become obscured by charge, counter charge and personalities since it first came to light last week.

He ended his reply by thanking members who "graciously listened", adding that he was grateful for their attention and shared their inner sense of goodwill.

Too bad there were only four Socialists and no Liberals in the House to hear the elegant windup to what was probably the best reply to the Throne Speech that will be heard this session.

SCOTT WALLACE
... everybody loves a Tory

about in private enterprise and leave the word "socialist" out of their rhetoric, he might support them or at least find them a morally preferable alternative to the Social Credit party.

It was Social Credit that wooed one half the Tory caucus in the person of Hugh Curtis: it was Social Credit which sat on its collective hands thinking time and politics would deliver Wallace into the fold too. And in one of the few gaffes of his maverick political career he toyed with the defunct Unity party that went

Proposed Code a Forward Step

The proposed police code formulated by the provincial police commission delineates for the first time citizen and police rights when complaints are laid. As such it is a model document, much needed in these times when police and public often appear as antagonists rather than the allies they should be. The most important aspect of the proposed code is that complaints will be heard in public. No more closed-door police board meetings or secret disciplinary actions against police officers can obscure the path of justice.

When a complaint is laid under the proposed code, the police chief will bring the citizen and the officer or officers in question together and the matter, hopefully, would be ironed out by means of an apology from either side. If that doesn't work the complainant can demand a written report from the chief of police on the incident. In the third stage, citizens have an "absolute right" to a hearing before the local police board, in public, with the press in attendance. If all these measures fail citizens can appeal directly to the attorney-general and the police commission for an inquiry.

Similarly, the much-abused police officer receives some long overdue rights. Counsel is allowed to represent his interests at the hearings and he is free to appeal any decision that might go against him. It is inconceivable that policemen still do not have the same rights as the citizens who might accuse them of wrong doing. Gone will be the internal police department investigations that often left a faintly suspicious air behind their decisions, decisions that often never saw the light of day.

The attorney-general's department should give serious study to the new code and quickly enact its relevant measures. Too many complaints against police officers end up being dropped or forgotten because the complainant is poor or has no recourse to expensive legal machinery. At the same time, how many police officers are disciplined with pay or seniority cuts for matters that never receive public scrutiny? The new code should clear up the murky areas and make for better relations between police and public, discourage frivolous complaints and ensure that justice is done under public scrutiny.

Kissinger Under Siege at Home

WASHINGTON — Some of the Democratic presidential candidates seem determined to make Secretary of State Henry Kissinger a central political issue in their campaigns, and if this goes on, he probably won't be around at the end.

He has always insisted that he would resign rather than involve the foreign policy of the country in an ugly partisan squabble, but it is hard to see how he can keep out of the political pit. More than any other man since John Foster Dulles or Dean Acheson, he has been highly personal and often secretive, and United States policies — on arms control, on trade with the Soviet Union, on Cyprus, Turkey, the Middle East, as well as on military aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia — have been highly controversial and very clearly identified with his recommendations.

Senator Henry Jackson of Washington State has been saying privately for months not only that Kissinger's arms control and Middle Eastern policies are wrong but that he is personally too soft in his negotiations with the Soviets.

Always on Bottom

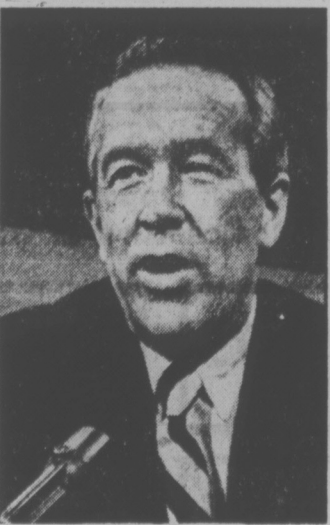

Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, accused Kissinger the other day of running a "dangerously constricted and convoluted" foreign policy, "with an undemocratic emphasis on secret diplomacy, personal negotiations, and one-man authoritarianism."

Meanwhile, George Ball, former under-secretary of state, who is himself thinking vaguely about running, or at least walking, for the presidency, has been criticizing Kissinger's approach to the whole Middle Eastern problem. And Terry Sanford, former governor of North Carolina and now president of Duke University, has been attacking Jackson for attacking Kissinger. In short, Henry seems to be winding up at the bottom of every political scrimmage.

Also, as the Middle Eastern negotiations approach the critical phase, Kissinger is getting into an extremely awkward position with the pro-Israeli faction in this country. He is known to favor substantial concessions by Israel in his efforts to arrange a compromise peace settlement with Egypt and Syria, and this is bitterly resented even by many of his friends in the American Jewish community and elsewhere.

This is not a serious problem for Kissinger on his present trip to the Middle

HENRY JACKSON
... critical of Kissinger

East. He is merely on an exploratory mission this time, to see whether there is any movement toward compromise in Jerusalem, Cairo and Damascus.

If there is, he will then try to formulate proposals for another step in the long negotiating process, and return to the Middle East in March.

But the longer these talks go on and the closer we come to the elections of 1976, the deeper Kissinger is likely to get entangled in politics.

He is trying to avoid this by stressing the importance of bipartisan support. He has held three long meetings with the new members of the 94th congress and offered to create a "partnership" with congress in the formulation of policy between now and November of 1976.

But this is not likely to impress Jackson, Bentsen and the others and it suggests that Kissinger is more cooperative than he actually is.

In spite of his recent conciliatory statements, he still feels that the recent congressional actions on the trade agreement with the Soviet Union, and cutting-off military aid to Turkey were damaging to U.S. interests. And he feels that the forthcoming congressional investigations of the CIA are, a "potential disaster."

Thus, there is no way for him to avoid involvement in these issues. President Ford himself was on the congressional committee that was supposed to oversee the operations of the CIA, but says he knew very little about the covert operations of that agency, and is now vaguely appalled about some of its operations.

Would Get Out

Kissinger, too, as head of the Committee of Forty which approved covert operations in Chile and elsewhere, will have to be questioned and his testimony will certainly make its way into the files of the Democratic candidates.

If he should feel that his involvement in the campaign is weakening his authority to speak and negotiate for the United States or that the Israeli government is stalling for time or hoping for the election of Senator Jackson, he would probably get out.

Just how this would enhance the popularity of the Democratic candidates, however, is not clear. Kissinger is still the most popular figure in Washington. If it appeared that he was driven from the office unfairly, this could hurt his detractors.

He is not making threats about any of this but one thing is fairly clear: He will not stick around and campaign for the Republicans or be a target until November, 1976, for the Democrats. He has many spectacular offers to write books in the next couple of years, and at 50, he could pull out for a while and still come back after the political howling has quieted down.

Youth Clubs

To curb vandalism and similar juvenile crimes all kinds of suggestions have been published and broadcast. One favored solution is to enlarge the police force to cope with that costly and deplorable situation. But is that not like searching for a cure after we have failed to explore prevention? Stereotyped opinions are nothing new or something to brag about. To voice them ad infinitum shows only that the speaker has failed to put his thinking cap on to find his own and probably a better solution to combat juvenile delinquency.

Anything likely to add to the tax burden with added police, without being certain that it works, is at best a gamble. Approaching the matter from a different angle we come to ask: Is it not possible to prevent vandalism and other related crimes by giving youth (and adolescence) a chance to let off steam in a positive way by engaging them with worthwhile projects and to occupy their minds in a rewarding way? One of them is to establish places, like youth clubs, where the young ones can come together at any time for their own entertainment, creative hobbies, discussions and other positive activities.

I suggest that the city and/or some generous citizens donate some building sites, where club houses could be erected. Then we can ask for some volunteers to design the buildings. Now we come to the building site, which has to be prepared by levelling, foundations to be excavated, etc. Here the youth itself has to do most of the work to make it "their" enterprise. Nothing improves the value of a project more than the work you put in yourself. Then the participants have the pride to refer to it as "our" club. The materials also can be solicited to be mostly donated.

Now my last word. Are there public-minded citizens, who are able and willing to meet such a challenge?

I am open to help in any way I can. Give me a call and let's organize.—J. A. W. v. Heyden, 992 Haliburton Road.

Alberta Attitudes

I read with a great deal of interest Natural Gas in Alberta and Joy in the Heavens in the Feb. 22 Editor's Notebook.

Last week, I spent a delightful few hours with my brother, director of the Alberta wheat pool and current president of the Calgary chamber of commerce. As I sat listening to this very interesting man I couldn't help thinking how much we were alike and yet he is a "dye-in-the-wool" Loughheed Conservative and I am a sworn-and-true Barrett socialist. Alberta was my home province before I "emigrated" to B.C. This brings me to my point. Mr. Oake climaxed in his article that Albertans were not happy, despite their material luxuries. There is a saying that if you give someone a gift, it is too little you feel resentment and if it is too much you feel guilt.

Albertans do look upon the oil lying under their soil as theirs and I rather suspect despite the guilt that it will be some time before they see it any other way.

The Cheaters: They Like to Win

By FRED KARPIN

(Karpin writes the daily bridge column that appears in the Times)

Some bridge players use their fingers, others their toes. Some prefer their left eyes, while still others have a thing for special effects such as glasses and pencils. These can be the most important elements of playing bridge — if your inclination is to cheat.

And that, it is believed, is the inclination of many a player, a suspicion raised anew by cheating charges lodged at the Bermuda Bowl late last month against two Italians, who were found guilty only of "improper conduct."

Nobody knows, of course, exactly how many people are tempted to cheat at bridge, either across their neighbors' tables or at tournament competitions. Bridge organizations are not prone to reveal how many cheaters they suspect or actually catch, or what their names are, though they will tell you of some incidents and the inventive methods used.

Consider, for example, the case of the Pencil Pushers. Some years ago, a pair of players had been winning tournaments with a consistency that began raising eyebrows.

A novice might not understand why a long winning streak would breed suspicion, but it should when one is playing against bridge players who are known to be more proficient than the winners. When a pair has a long winning streak which, in the opinion of their superior adversaries, is not commensurate with their ability, something is indeed rotten in Denmark.

The Pencil Pushers' secret was that when they sat down in a tournament, one took out four pencils and put them on the table. One pencil was red, another orange, a third blue and a fourth black. The pencils were positioned lengthwise towards the wielder and his partner, with the colored point pointing toward the partner.

When the cheater wanted to indicate strength in spades, he put the black pencil to the left of the others; when he wanted to show strength in hearts, the red pencil was put to the left of the others. The orange pencil, put to the left, denoted strength in diamonds, and the blue pencil to the left indicated strength in clubs.

Some cheaters used more ingenious methods, such as the eye-glazing technique revealed about two decades ago at a trial conducted by the American Contract Bridge League.

In that case, one of the accused players had a special pair of eyeglasses in which his partner could see all of the wearer's cards reflected. The cards were visible only to the person sitting directly opposite the wearer.

If the "reader" moved more than seven or eight degrees to the left or right, he could not see the reflected cards. The opponents, of course, could never see the reflection, since each was at an angle approximately 90 degrees off centre.

The Glass Gazers were found guilty and barred for life from further participation in any tournaments held under the aegis of the bridge league, which conducts all tournaments in North America.

The behavior of the two Italian players, announced at the ungdy hour of 3:30 in the morning on Jan. 27 at the Southampton-Princess Hotel in Bermuda, was not nearly so scientific as this. As Julius Rosenbloom, president of the World Bridge Federation, put it:

"On Jan. 27, at 3:15 a.m., it was resolved, after hearing voluminous testimony, that Gianfranco Facchini and Sergio Zucchelli, members of the Italian Bermuda Bowl team of 1975, be severely reprimanded for improper conduct with respect to Mr. Facchini moving his feet unnaturally, and touching his partner's feet during the action and before the opening lead" in a qualifying match against the French team.

Since the U.S. team was scheduled to meet the Italians later in the day, a prompt resolution of the cheating allegation was needed, one which would at least temporarily placate both sides.

When the match was finally played that day, Italy whitewashed the United States by a score of 20-0, with its two "severely reprimanded" players sitting on the sidelines.

manded" players sitting on the sidelines. A few hours after the conclusion of the match, the case against the Italians was officially terminated when the World Bridge Federation announced: "This statement is intended to clarify the decision handed down by the appeals committee concerning Gianfranco Facchini and Sergio Zucchelli."

"The committee, after hearing all evidence, determined that the pair was guilty only of improper conduct at the table. No other findings were made, and the case is now closed."

What triggered all of this frenzied excitement? Who was it that had his sights focussed on the feet of two bridge players and came up with "facts" that suddenly whisked the world into the thin air sniffed by bridge players of international stature — and left everybody gasping?

It started with a newspaperman having the conviction that he was seeing smoke where there should have been no smoke. The journalist was Bruce Keidan, a reporter of the Philadelphia Inquirer. He had volunteered to serve as a monitor in a qualifying match between France and Italy. (A monitor has no official function. He observes the match in a room that is closed to the public, and hopes that all will be peace and quiet so that he can enjoy the game.)

During the first two deals, Keidan was relaxing. But on the third deal, he noticed something unusual: Facchini's right foot glided forward and tapped twice on Zucchelli's left shoe.

Keidan kept watching. In the 16-deal session, the same foot movement by Facchini took place five more times, tapping Zucchelli's left foot either once or twice. Keidan was certain of strange goings-on.

At the end of the match, Keidan went to Alfred Sheinwald, the non-playing captain of the U.S. team, and reported on what he had seen. Sheinwald then submitted the account to the World Bridge Federation, which attempted to determine the validity of Keidan's observations.

Were the tappings of Zucchelli's foot by Facchini inadvertent? According to Keidan, they were not. In a court of law, Keidan's "proof" would not stand up, but his reasoning is food for thought.

In his statement to the World Bridge Federation, he said: "What would you do if you had your feet under the dinner table and the person sitting opposite you accidentally stepped on one of your feet? Wouldn't you move your foot away, reflexively, or to make sure it wouldn't happen again? Well, not once during the six tappings did Zucchelli ever move his tapped-on left foot. It remained firmly implanted on the floor."

The foot movements were not denied by the Italian players. The explanation by the Italian non-playing captain was that they were nervous gestures, without meaning.

The motivation that breeds cheaters is of enduring interest. What drives the professional bridge cheater into his errant ways is easy to see and understand: he cheats for financial gain, recognizing that his highly skilled trade is a dangerous one which is subject to the same rewards and penalties as apply to any other rule-breaking.

But the reason why people cheat in tournaments or in their homes is not so easy to isolate. In tournaments, victory brings only little "in cups" with the winners' names sometimes engraved on them, plus "master points" which raise the victors to a higher rank in the national standings. The tournaments hold no financial incentive, either present or future. No stakes, or betting, are permitted. Why, then, do some people cheat?

The answer, perhaps, can be found in a tale told by the later Somerset Maugham. He once related how he was regularly being cheated at bridge, not by two swindlers but by a pair of wealthy acquaintances to whom the winning or losing of a few pounds meant nothing. In these games played on the Riviera, the stakes were quite nominal. When asked why they were cheating, he replied: "They liked to win."

Canada Needs an Anti-Secrets Law

By JAMES EAYRS

Canadian and American lawmakers moved in opposite directions last week. There's nothing wrong with that — on the contrary, we need to differentiate our product in a North America that's becoming more and more homogenized. That's what Canada is all about. But only if our product is superior in quality. In this instance it is decidedly inferior.

The lawmakers of Canada moved in the direction of continued secrecy in government. The lawmakers of the United States moved in the direction of greater openness in government.

On Feb. 18, the president of the Privy Council told members of a parliamentary committee that they had no right to know, that the government discloses information only at its pleasure. On Feb. 19, the president of the United States became bound by a Freedom of Information Act drastically amended by the Congress to ensure prompt and fuller disclosure of information by the Executive Branch to the American people and their representatives.

MINK
... U.S. advocate

"The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance." No one knows that better than Congresswoman Patsy T. Mink, whose efforts to secure not just information but the right to information led to the legislation last week in Washington. If the amendments to the U.S. Freedom of Information Act aren't known as the Mink Amendments, they ought to be.

The U.S. Freedom of Information Act became law on the symbolic date of July 4, 1967—the successful culmination of months of lobbying by a coalition of Congressmen, journalists and consumer activists like Ralph Nader. "I signed this measure," President Lyndon Johnson declared, "with a deep sense of pride that the United States is an open society in which the people's right to know is cherished and guarded."

Believe that and believe anything. If Johnson signed the measure with any pride, it was pride in its crafty drafting creating loopholes through which—long experience in the ways of Washington made him feel sure—bureaucrats intent upon evasion and cover-up could be relied upon to slip. He was opposed to the whole idea of the people's right to know. By the war in Vietnam his administration was already enmeshed in deception and conspiracy. The proper custodian of the nation's secrets was the imperial presidency. He signed the Freedom of Information Act because he had to and because he knew it need not make the slightest difference to his secretive style of rule.

So it proved. A moment of truth arrived moments after his delivery of the homily prepared for the occasion of his signing of the Act. "No one should be able to pull curtains of secrecy around decisions," Johnson had intoned, adding the crippling rider "which can be revealed without injury to the public interest." He was at once asked by a reporter if he would demonstrate his good faith in the new law by making public the original draft of the statement he had just been reading. The president refused.

During succeeding summers, Nader's Raiders—students of law and politics determined to find out how government really works by the incomparable method of battling bureaucracy—descended upon Washington departments and agencies armed with their new weapon. It proved worse than useless. "The law, if anything, has increased the bureaucratic paranoia about public scrutiny," an editor of the Washington Monthly wrote in 1972. "In almost every case brought before the courts, the agencies said disclosure would interrupt their work and make regulation impossible." The courts tended to agree.

Nader's Raiders had attempted to penetrate such administrative mysteries as the criteria by which meat is inspected and pronounced fit for consumption by which pesticides are decreed safe for public sale. Their protracted battle with the Department of Agriculture for its files on Shell's Vapona No-Pest Strip—when they got to the cabinets the files were gone—deserves a place in the casebooks on public administration. But a more dramatic confrontation was in the making.

By the summer of 1971, the were prepared for the advice of the President and involve a highly sensitive matter that is vital to our national defense and foreign policy. Therefore, I regret to inform you that they are not available for release." The reply was signed by one John W. Dean III. Whereupon Representative Mink went to law.

The law didn't delay the Cannikin shot—the blast took place as scheduled in October, Hawaii duly survived—it only delayed the verdict. On January 22, 1973, the law's delay was ended. "The Supreme Court ruling was against us," Representative Mink wrote sadly afterward, "in effect shattering our one-sided hopes for the Freedom of Information Act." Mr. Justice William O. Douglas, predictably in the minority, was just as predictably caustic in his comment. Henceforth, he predicted, "the Executive will hold complete sway and by ipse dixit make even the time of day 'top secret'."

Things nearly came to that, but they didn't come to that. The Supreme Court's ruling in the Mink case marks the zenith of the Nixon presidency. The Gallup Poll, the Nobel Prize Committee, the Dow-Jones Industrial Index all testified to its success. Then came Watergate, and the fall.

The amendments to the U.S. Freedom of Information Act which came into force last week—there are 17 of them in all—are designed to close the loopholes of the 1967 version, to make it easier for the people of the United States and their representatives in Congress to get information out of government.

Whether they will be effective time will tell. That they are likely to be effective is indicated by President Gerald Ford's opposition to them—an opposition carried to the length of a presidential veto, which the Congress promptly and overwhelmingly overrode.

Americans now have a Freedom of Information Act with teeth in it. Canadians now have an Official Secrets Act with teeth in it. I wouldn't trade countries, but I would trade laws. What this country needs is an Anti-Secrets Act, like theirs.

When the Cause Is Noble

The average person rarely meets any terrorists, except those connected with the government, and so, in our ignorance of them, we tend to think of them as bestial and inhuman. This probably does them a cruel injustice.

It is true that terrorism requires its practitioners to be unpleasant, even murderous, to other people. But their motives are invariably kind, humane and even high-minded. Indeed, few forms of human behavior more adequately express the quintessence of homo sapiens than a terror bombing, for it satisfies the human urge to be beastly to one's fellow man, woman and child and justifies the cruelty on ground that it will make the world a better place.

The terrorist is a believer in uplift. He believes in the perfectability of man and is prepared to kill you in order to improve the world for you.

Most of us, of course, have a horror of sudden and premature dispatch to the beyond, even for the sake of improving the planet, and for this reason we tend to disapprove of small-scale terrorism. This distaste is intensified by the fact that the noble cause for which we are to be dispatched often seems less than vital to us.

In fact, there is such a variety of terrorists at work these days in such a variety of good causes that it is altogether possible to be hired rapidly to the grave without even being aware of the good cause you died to promote. The people who died in the recent Wall Street bombing, for example, had probably never been aware of a Puerto Rican independence movement which, the bombers said, required their deaths.

If you travel to Northern Ireland you will probably know that the high-minded cause for which you are bombed at your beer is either independence from russell baker

British rule, or continuance of British rule, but if you cross to London the ground is trickier.

Not long ago terrorists in a passing car pumped bullets into a West End hotel, and since there had been a spate of bombings there in the cause of a better Ireland, you would naturally have assumed, had you been shot there, that it was to improve life on the emerald isle. In this you would have been wrong.

The police deduced that since there was a Jewish gathering in progress at the hotel, the real point of the mayhem was to promote justice for the displaced Arabs of Palestine. Thus, in your last millisecond on earth, it is entirely possible that which great cause you are nobly serving by passage to the other side.

"I am crossing for old Ireland," you might sensibly conclude, having considered the terrain, when in fact, all unbeknownst, you are actually improving the Middle East, striking a blow for oppressed people of Argentina, helping to end warfare in Vietnam or—who knows?—helping stop cruelty to animals in Sarawak.

When one is compelled to part with life for high-minded causes one likes to know what the cause is. It is highly unsatisfying to cross the chasm for uplift without even knowing what will be uplifted as a result.

Governments, which are far and away the most vigorous practitioners of terrorism, understand this human quick. When they make war they first saturate you with official announcements explaining that you are to be killed for freedom, or for the liberation from the coils of imperialistic capitalism, or for something equally improving, and then they saturate you with bullets, fire and bombs.

All through history, people have tolerated terrorism whose purpose has been adequately explained to them, and most people probably approve it. Probably one of the chief reasons for American resistance to the Vietnam war was the government's failure to come up with an explanation of which great humanitarian purpose was being promoted by the bloodshed.

Government error is not limited to the use of bombs and guns. In places like Chile, it embraces torture to create a society purified by release from Communism. In the Soviet Union, it includes imprisonment in insane asylums to create a world where all people can approach nearer to paradise.

In the United States, keeper of police files on citizen activities, tapper of telephones, opener of mail, one is never aware whether Big Brother Sam is aware that if one's name is on file at the F.B.I., or the phone is tapped, or the mail is being steamed open at the post office, it is for a wonderful cause—the preservation of individual freedom.

Government defense of these practices is the same as the small-bore terrorist's defense of dynamiting helpless people at the lunch counter. The cause is too noble to be lost through squeamishness. What neither government nor unofficial terrorist ever concedes is that terror, besides being so good for humanity, also fulfills some dark human yearning to give one's fellow man the works.

Wallace Regrets 'Watergate' Slur

Conservative leader Scott Wallace apologized to the legislature Tuesday for using the word "Watergate" in connection with the "Secret" B.C. Hydro committee on the Columbia River Treaty.

"I do regret the use of the word Watergate," he said, adding, however, that a "measure of deception" was discussed by the committee and a full investigation is needed.

Existence of the 1967 committee came to light last week when the government tabled minutes of its meetings which showed former Hydro chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside appointed the group to study ways of reallocating cost overruns of the three Columbia dams.

Wallace said the minutes did not show, however, whether recommendations were ever made to the government or whether the government did reallocate costs.

Instead of going on a witch hunt, he said, a full judicial inquiry should be held to solve those unanswered questions.

Wallace was speaking during a long day of throne speech debate which treated the public galleries to much rhetoric and little new information.

Bob McClelland (S.C. - Langley) again raised the chicken and egg war issue and accused Premier Barrett of being "less than honest" with the people of B.C.

The Sacred read Hansard from last year which quotes the premier as denying he had ordered the B.C. Egg Marketing Board to do anything.

He then quoted the recent court judgment on the egg board which said an agreement was reached as the result of the intervention of the premier and said the two documents can not be reconciled.

"There is no doubt that the premier did intervene and use the power of his office as a clout," said McClelland.

If Barrett had admitted his actions the people would have understood, said McClelland, but he denied the charges and "that's on his conscience."

McClelland said the NDP government is "shoving its ideological 'urges' down the throats of local governments."

The best example, he said, is the petro-chemical plant planned for Surrey which is "an ecological time bomb about to destroy an area of B.C."

Such a plant would "discharge 130,000 pounds of oil and grease into the atmosphere annually," he said, and affect the whole Lower Mainland.

Sacred Harvey Schroeder (Chilliwack) said Education Minister Eileen Dailly is

... wants probe

"long on idealism" in her plans to reduce student-teacher ratios in the province but the government does not have enough money to carry out its plans.

Meanwhile, whatever the ratios, there is a need for a return to competition and standards in education, he said.

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson defended the government's record in providing money for new programs and listed all the recreational and other funds channelled into his own riding.

He said the NDP has provided more senior citizens' housing than the former Sacred government and has pledged to take care of the pioneers of this province.

Soft-spoken Daisy Webster (NDP - Vancouver South) criticized discrimination against women in both federal and provincial jurisdictions.

"Our whole system is inclined to be patriarchal," she said urging more family life instruction in schools, removal of abortion from the Criminal Code and more philosophical support from men.

"Every educated man is just as anxious to equalize the position of women," she said.

'Nudity' Charges Retracted

A Social Credit MLA told the legislature Tuesday he had no intention of misleading the house when he accused a publicly-funded research institute of conducting "experiments in nudity."

Harvey Schroeder (S.C. - Chilliwack) said he was misled by articles in the Educational Research Institute of B.C.'s monthly publication and thus his statements to the legislature earlier in the day were also misleading.

Schroeder had said the ERIBC funded the "Summerland experiment" which involved nudity and "touching, feeling, flicking, etc., etc."

The government-funded the independent research agency for a total of $189,605 in the last fiscal year.

Further investigation, however, revealed that the Summerland Human Sexuality Project was sponsored by the local school board in October, 1973, under the direction of the Summerland Secondary School principal and with the consent of parents.

ERIBC contributed $400 to the project which involved Grade 11 and 12 students attending a weekend of seminars and discussions on human sexuality.

ERIBC spokesman Stan Garrod said the project was considered a great success by students and parents and no mention was ever made of nudity or sexual contact.

Edge, the ERIBC's monthly magazine, carried an article on the project in its December issue and the article was among several on the entire question of human sexuality.

The issue was interspersed with pictures of young naked children and Schroeder said he had misinterpreted the layout to mean the pictures and the short stories about nudity all referred to the Summerland project.

ERIBC was originally funded by the B.C. Teachers' Federation and the B.C. School Trustees' Association and now still receives some funds from those organizations although most money comes from the government.

LOTTERY PROFITABLE

British Columbia will net a profit of $658,538 from the first Western Canada Lottery.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday the money will be put into a special fund to assist development of recreation and culture in B.C.

Ticket sales in B.C. for the first lottery, held Nov. 2, amounted to more than $1.5 million.

Out of that money, more than 450 non-profit sales agencies earned $178,103 for specific projects and individual ticket sellers earned $338,410 in commissions.

The second lottery was completed Feb. 15 and sales figures are expected shortly. Tickets are now on sale for the spring draw which will be held in Vancouver May 12.

In another announcement, Hall said a study of catalogue support systems for B.C. libraries will be conducted by Infotec, a Vancouver-based firm of information technology consultants.

Terms of reference include assigning a high priority to implementation of a system to act as the initial stage of development towards a province-wide catalogue system.

R. W. McDonald, co-ordinator of technical service at University of B.C.'s library, will work on the study, with Peter Simmons, assistant professor at UBC's school of librarianship and G. R. Campbell, library systems analyst at University of Victoria.

Local Poultry Plant Seeks Moving Aid

A local poultry processing firm has requested financial assistance from the provincial government to acquire a plant in Abbotsford.

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said his department is giving top priority to the request by Maplewood Poultry Processors Ltd., 2901 Sooke Road, for a loan guarantee under the Farm Products Industry Improvement Act.

Maplewood wants to acquire and re-activate the Willows Poultry Processing Plant recently closed by Canada Packers Ltd. and Stupich said further information on the company's purchase will be available later this week.

Stupich, in a statement Tuesday, said he is encouraged at the initiative of Maplewood and he expressed the government's deep concern at the serious unemployment resulting from the closure in Abbotsford.

Maplewood processes poultry and turkey meat for domestic markets.

Casa Loma Lien Issue Dodged

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson Tuesday declined to specify when his department had initiated purchase discussions with Casa Loma Motel Ltd. for 125 units to house senior citizens in Burnaby.

First in the house and later outside the chamber, Nicolson dodged this aspect of the purchase which earlier aroused Liberal Leader David Anderson.

Nicolson said the matter was before the courts and therefore he could not comment on Anderson's query as to whether the housing department had given owners of the Casa Loma "prior knowledge" of the government's intention to purchase before liens were settled with subcontractors.

Commitment to purchase the complex was made Dec. 24, said Nicolson, and deliberations by the department on whether to purchase or not began last July.

Nicolson said a special committee that reviews purchase possibilities in the department — which consists of representatives of Dunhill Development Corp., the municipality, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the B.C. Housing Management Committee — did investigate whether liens were connected with the property.

"But the matter of responsibility for liens lies between the contractor and the subcontractor," said Nicolson, adding that it was widely established that he "wanted everything cleared up before I touched it."

"It's not my problem," Responding to other concerns raised in the legislature, Nicolson said the $3.18 million purchase price worked out to $25,420 per unit, compared to a replacement cost estimated by Dunhill at $29,650.

"We received good value," said Nicolson, adding he was not aware that Casa Loma had advertised the building for less.

On the matter of whether Casa Loma made substantial profit from the purchase, Nicolson said it was "unlikely."

The minister said Casa Loma agreed to pay out $170,000 to have liens discharged and Dunhill sent a letter agreeing to the contract.

Payment schedule allows for two staggered payments of $570,000 and $450,000 and a 15 per cent holdback payment until the complex is satisfactorily completed.

The court action Nicolson mentioned is a suit launched in B.C. Supreme Court alleging a fraudulent misrepresentation by the project's developers and main contractors.

A subcontractor on the project, Eric's Plumbing and Hydronics Ltd., filed a writ on Monday asking damages from Casa Loma Motel Ltd., and Coastside Construction Co. Ltd.

The writ says Casa Loma, through its director's Ramzan Gangli, Akber Gangli, Amir Virani and Abdul Parekh, and Coastside, "executed and dealt in a fictitious and fraudulent cost-plus building contract for the construction of the Casa Loma complex."

Eric's Plumbing asks judgment against the defendants for $22,000 plus interest at the rate of 18 per cent.

The firm was one of 51 subcontractors who had claims of $390,000 in outstanding bills against the project.

Wage Drop Rapped

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall Tuesday slammed the previous Socred administration for allowing wages of some civil servants in B.C. to drop to minimum wage level.

"We had people carrying out our own orders ... who were classed by an independent survey as the working poor."

Hall said that in the decade prior to 1973 wages paid to B.C. public servants had not risen to the same extent as wages set by the bargaining process.

He said that when the NDP took office it found some full-time employees who were paid so poorly they actually qualified for the drug subsidy plan.

"These were hidden cases in the former government payrolls, the working poor."

Hall cited some wage examples: $332 monthly for a clerk or switchboard operator, $430 monthly for a forest assistant; $500 monthly for a senior janitor with many years of service.

He said the government attempted to improve this situation by "bottom loading" pay increases — providing higher percentage increases to lower paid workers.

The provincial secretary said he could not shed light on collective agreements reached by bargaining components within the public service until all contracts negotiations are completed.

He was responding to a question earlier in the week from Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver-Capilano).

Before collective agreements were made possible by the government, he said, public service employees' wages had fallen further and further behind, compared to the federal government.

He said component agreements vary on most features although some have some elements in common.

Of the public service's 13 components, agreements have been reached on nine.

Condominium Rebate Probe Promised

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young has promised to look into a Lower Mainland development firm's offer of monthly rebates on the sale of condominiums.

Dion Development has advertised rebates of $200 a month for one year or $50 a month for five years to people who purchase a condominium in their Quilchena Park development in Richmond.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace raised the issue in the legislature Tuesday and suggested the give-away will raise rather than lower the price of the condominiums and therefore should be examined for misleading advertising.

Young said she did not know of the advertisement and added that the Trade Practices Act does not cover real estate, insurance or securities.

But she promised her department would investigate.

'HARRY'S WORK' ON VIEW

An exhibition, simply titled "Harry's Work", is on show at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government Street.

The show which ends Friday consists of collage, mixed media and acrylic paintings. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Opening on Saturday at the Carr Centre is a unique and varied collection of graphics, silkscreens and etchings by Peter Chandler and Carl Beam. It will continue through March 15, Saturday hours are 10 a.m. to noon.

Chandler, a native of England, taught art for several years in Ontario public schools. Beam is an Ojibway Indian, originally from Ontario.

Both artists are continuing their art studies at the University of Victoria.

Workers' Brawl Probe Set

HALIFAX (CP) — Disturbed by "exaggerated and inaccurate" accounts by out-of-province media about a weekend brawl involving Scottish workers at a Cape Breton labor camp, Premier Gerald Regan announced in the legislature Tuesday that an independent inquiry would be started into the incident later this week.

He said he would appoint someone to head a one-man inquiry within 48 hours, mainly to counter distorted stories of the fight in some United Kingdom newspapers and media outside Nova Scotia.

Three workers dismissed from the heavy water plant construction project here were involved in the brawl, a reliable source said today.

The source said one of the fired workers was from Ontario, one from the Nova Scotia mainland and the third from Cape Breton Island.

Earlier, a union official said that as far as the union could determine, the brawl at a work camp involved workers from Scotland and Canadians from outside Cape Breton.

A spokesman for the prime contractor at the construction site said today two of the workers were fired for "breaking camp regulations" and the third for absenteeism.

Recital Features Flutist

Featured at the weekly Friday evening recital at Craigdarroch Castle this week will be Victoria Conservatory of Music faculty member Hans Boellaard.

The flutist will be assisted at the piano by Peter Zimmermann.

Boellaard received most of his musical training in Holland and has been featured as soloist with the Edmonton and Vancouver CBC orchestras.

A participant in the Chopin festival in Warsaw and the Queen Elizabeth competition in Brussels, Zimmermann was active in the San Francisco Bay area before coming to Victoria.

The concert program includes five excerpts from Taj Mahal, a suite by Paul Horn and a composition for flute and piano by Zimmermann.

Postal Code Use Lags in City

Victorians are lagging well behind other Canadians in using the new postal code, post office spokesman Buz Sawyer said today.

While the national acceptance rate of the code on a daily basis is 42.8 per cent, the acceptance rate in Victoria is only 27 per cent, Sawyer said.

"And those who don't use the code are simply getting slower mail service," he said.

Sawyer explained that the first three digits of the six-character code identify the general geographic location of the address — the province, town and section of that town.

The last three digits pinpoint a small section of the city, for example, one side of a city block, an apartment building, an office building or a large business firm.

"This unique postal code was the first major step in our mechanization program," Sawyer said.

Under the program, letter sorting machines will ultimately be installed in the 26 cities across Canada which account for 85 per cent of Canadian mail. In B.C., sorting machines will be installed in Vancouver and Victoria.

Sawyer said a Victoria mail processing plant is in its final planning stage. Target date for completion is October, 1976.

"Mail manually sorted is handled anywhere from six to 20 times, but mail sorted by machines will be handled only about three times.

"It really cuts down on so much time," he said. "But to be machineable, mail must bear the postal code and fit the machine."

The maximum size an envelope can be is six inches by 10 inches, the minimum size is 3½ inches by 5½ inches.

Sawyer said the postal code can also be used very effectively for manual sortation.

"Just looking at the code, we can tell what province, what city and what street the letter is being sent."

There is a postal coding unit in Victoria, he said, and anyone wishing to have their mailing list coded can write Room 203-1230 Government Street, Victoria, V8W 2Y8.

Body Shops Dropping Last of Surcharges

Victoria auto body shops are expected this week to remove the last in a series of surcharges for work done under the provincial Autoplan insurance system.

The members of the Victoria branch of the Automotive Retailers' Association voted in late December to remove the minimum $2 per hour surcharge on the basic work rate of $14 per hour.

The body shops accepted an offer at that time by the Insurance Corporation of B.C. to do car repair work at $15.50, ending the surcharge which had been in effect in the Victoria area since Oct. 1, 1974.

But until this week, the body shops have been charging a $2.85 per hour surcharge on what is called "remove and replace" work, for example, taking off a fender, then bolting it back on.

Victoria ARA president Dennis Butler said letters have been sent out today to all area body shops urging them to forego the "remove and replace" surcharge.

Butler said the ICBC does not allow any charges for the bolting work and "we still require this money," he said.

"But we found that this hassle was not accomplishing anything for the membership, the ICBC or the public."

The ARA across the province will be looking for further rate increases from the ICBC in May, the date of new union contracts for automotive repair workers and Butler said the lifting of the surcharges in Victoria is "an effort to clear things up before the May rates."

Preclearance From Victoria?

The Victoria International Airport is one of four Canadian air terminals being considered as customs preclearance points for airline passengers.

Other preclearance offices may be established at Calgary, Edmonton and Halifax.

Preclearance is the system under which a passenger flying from Canada to the United States is able to clear U.S. customs at the point of departure.

Customs service at the two Alberta airports could be in operation within a year.

Major expansion of existing facilities at Vancouver and Winnipeg are under study.

Neither Canadian or American spokesmen are willing to estimate when the customs service will be established in Victoria and Halifax.

But both sources stress that demands of traffic must be weighed against the cost of stationing crews of inspectors abroad at a time of economic recession and resultant budget limitations.

Airlines must cover the cost of the physical facilities.

Southern Vancouver Island and lower mainland teachers today marched to the Legislative Buildings to protest what they called inadequate funding for education and government failure to keep its promises.

"Education finance is in a mess," said John Hardy of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation office in Vancouver.

While BCET officials met with Education Minister Eileen Daily to submit their demands, "alarmed" presidents of teacher associations pressured their MLAs.

Leo Chaland, president of the North Vancouver association, said his district's school board had acted in good faith, believing government promises for extra funds in order to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio.

But Daily told the teachers the education department is definitely freezing the teacher-pupil ratio.

"We didn't feel it was responsible financing to inject another 2,000 teachers into the province's education system."

The government's commitment to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio to 17:1 was made in good faith and the program will continue when economic conditions improve, she said.

Chaland said this year's mill rate for education would jump another 13 mills, meaning an extra $100 to $200 to every homeowner.

Chaland said his association was pressuring the government to keep its promise to remove the education tax from property.

Glen Plueckhahn, president of the Nanaimo association, said his area had more pupils per teacher than anywhere else in the province.

In spite of this, Plueckhahn said, to maintain the status quo of education in the Nanaimo area the mill rate will have to be increased 12 mills (about 33 per cent).

Library Budget Approved

Greater Victoria Library Board Tuesday approved a $1,403,897 budget after chopping $150,000 from the provisional figures.

The budget is 10.09 per cent higher than last year but does not include possible salary increases resulting from negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing library employees.

One third of the spending cutbacks were made in the purchase of new books.

This was made possible by the delayed opening of Saanich's Nellie McClung branch, now slated for completion in 1976.

Further budget cuts were made in personnel, furnishings, supplementary programs, and the building and maintenance programs.

The budget now goes to municipal councils for approval.

Up-Island Mayors Steaming At Dayliner Schedule Switch

CP Rail's Dayliner service between Victoria and Courtenay will launch a "somewhat experimental" new schedule April 28 and initial reaction from up-island community spokesmen is hostile.

The Dayliner will depart Victoria daily except Sunday at 5 p.m., arriving at Nanaimo at 7 p.m. leaving at 7:20 and arriving at Courtenay at 9 p.m.

At 9:10 p.m. it will head south again, arriving at Nanaimo at 10:50 p.m. and staying there overnight. It will leave Nanaimo at 8 a.m. arriving at Victoria at 10 a.m.

The Dayliner now leaves Victoria at 8:30 a.m., reaching Courtenay at 12:40 p.m. and starting the return journey at 1 p.m. to reach Victoria at 3 p.m.

Bob Ferguson, information officer for CP Rail, said from Vancouver today the new schedule was to have been announced and advertised closer to the start date but an up-island newspaper heard of the change and contacted CP Rail. There will be public announcement of the changes coming, he said.

The Dayliner service, which is operated by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, a subsidiary of CP Rail, has generated a continuing stream of criticism from communities it serves in recent years.

An application to the Canadian Transport Commission by the rail company in 1970 to discontinue the service or have its operating losses subsidized produced stormy hearings in Victoria and led to the CTC ordering the service to be improved and denying a subsidy.

CP Rail has another application currently pending before the CTC. It wants the service reviewed once more to see whether it serves a "useful purpose," should be subsidized or discontinued. The company says its Dayliner losses in 1973 were about $200,000.

The application was filed with the CTC in December but the commission has not yet indicated whether it will hold public hearings again on the question.

Ferguson said today he could not say whether there had been public consultation on the new Dayliner schedule, which he called "somewhat experimental," but he said there has been a consistent public claim the service should be run "the other way," meaning the schedule should be arranged so up-island passengers could have a day in Victoria.

Meanwhile, up-island spokesmen condemned the new timetable.

Courtenay Mayor William Moore said if the subject wasn't so serious, the new schedule would be "hysterically funny."

"Maybe they've become so ridiculous that something will come out of it," he said.

Cumberland Mayor William Moncrief, an outspoken critic of the rail service, said the new schedule is the reverse of what is needed.

He urged experimentation with operating two trains, one northbound and one southbound, crossing near Nanaimo.

Comox Mayor Richard Merrick said "they're giving us a snow job." He said the new timetable makes things worse for Courtenay-Comox residents.

CLINIC, ARENA AND THE MAN HIMSELF

'Nice Gardener' Enjoys Dig

There are some people used to high office (and many used to no office at all) who would be a trifle upset if they were mistaken for the gardener.

But not Major-General George Randolph Pearkes.

It has happened to British Columbia's former lieutenant-governor but he just laughs about it, as he does about most things in life.

In fact, that was where I found him — in the garden (where else) of his almost two-acre mini estate on Tattersall Drive when we got together to chat about New Zealand and Australia and 87th birthdays.

Right here in Victoria we have the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and the G. R. Pearkes Arena and we have the man himself, a sort of legend in his own time. He is 87 today.

G. R. was a Member of Parliament for 15 years and was defence minister in the Diefenbaker government from 1957 to 1961 until he accepted the appointment as lieutenant-governor. He retired from Government House in 1968 when he was named "British Columbian of the Year" and had bestowed on him by the then premier W. A. C. Bennett, the Order of the Dogwood, the province's highest honor.

By then, of course, he was quite used to awards. Shining out among a host of lesser honors are the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order, the Military Cross and the Companion of the Order of Canada. Quite recently, he was made an honorary member of the RCMP veterans' association — G. R. joined the RCMP in 1912 and was stationed in the Yukon until the outbreak of the First World War. While making yet another award in 1963, Governor-General Roland Michener called Pearkes "the most decorated man I know."

We went inside where his Alberta-born wife Constance Blytha made us coffee and, being as polite as I could, I said I was sorry to take him away from the garden.

"I'm sorry you're taking me away," he said quickly but with a big grin.

George and Blytha Pearkes, who celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in August this year, have just returned from a month's trip Down Under. They visited Fiji, Auckland and Christchurch in N. Z., and Sydney and Canberra in Australia, with several side trips, they loved it. George didn't even find it too tiring either, but felt that a lot of time was wasted, waiting around airports.

"That's enough travel for one year," says G. R. lightly. "I've always wanted to go to South Africa, but I don't suppose I ever will." And then he laughs. "I think I'll settle down now."

Pearkes was born in Watford in north London, England, and obviously his daughter-in-law Joyce (she's married to their son John, a 43-year-old Vancouver lawyer) comes from Watford in Ontario.

The famous Victorian, who thinks soccer is "a fine team game for youngsters" and can be seen regularly at local matches, has no wishes for the rest of his life except "to potter around the garden" and get it looking even better than it does now. And he doesn't particularly want to live to be 100.

"I enjoy life and I'll take it as it comes," he says wisely. "If I live to be 100 then I'll enjoy life till I'm 100." But he says he would like to see his grandsons, 15-year-old Anthony and 13-year-old Timothy, grow up and "get started."

G. R. glances down at pet poddle Binky, who pleading for one of the cookies that went with the coffee, and smiles.

"Once we had a boxer dog called Baron, but I couldn't give him enough exercise. He would run away from Government House and go downtown and terrorize people by standing up and peering in car windows."

"Yes, we paid a lot of money to the pound for Baron," laughs Blytha.

"We finally gave him away to the RCMP," says George. "He was a beautiful animal, but he was too much for me. I bought him from Mother Cecilia when she ran the Animal Shelter on Braefoot. She was very particular about who he was going to — and she wanted all sorts of references."

The Pearkes have had their beautiful home for 30 years but, says Blytha, until now they really haven't had time to enjoy it. They rented it while in Ottawa and while occupying Government House.

With a smile, Blytha kids George that he is out in the garden "as soon as it's light and reluctantly comes in when it's getting dark." So he doesn't really mind being mistaken for the gardener.

"You know, once when we were renting the place, I came back from Government House to tidy up the garden," G. R. says with his broad grin.

"... And a small boy ran into the house crying 'Mommy, the nice gardener has come again.'"

Bawlf to Study Exchange Plan

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf was authorized Tuesday by city council to sound out the possibility of a property exchange that would see city-owned land traded for federal holdings in Victoria.

Bawlf recently suggested — with enthusiastic support from council and from Greater Victoria Library Board chairman Ald. Shirley Dowell — that the main Post Office building on Government would be a suitable site for a new central library, when the building is vacated under postal service modernization plans. He is planning to visit Ottawa next month to discuss the library proposal with Public Works Minister Charles Drury, and he told council's caucus meeting Tuesday that it might strengthen Victoria's case if the city could offer some of its own land in exchange.

"It's possible some of our residual Blanshard property (from the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal project) might be suitable for this purpose," he said.

Bawlf said the federal authorities are now carrying out a survey of their accommodation needs in this area "over the long haul," and already are finding an acute shortage of centrally-located land suitable for development. "They have under-built so drastically in the past that they are now leasing about half the space they actually use in the city," he said.

I think it would be appropriate at this time to submit to the public works minister a formal declaration of our interest in the Post Office building as a possible future library site, and to ask for his co-operation.

"We may have some land somewhere in our inventory that could be part of a trade-off,"

Ald. Murray Glazier said any discussions with Ottawa on federal development plans in the city should include the soon-to-be-built federal marine services base at Ogden Point, and a study of its impact on the James Bay residential area.

STRIKE SCUTTLES DRAMA FESTIVAL

The 35th annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, which was to have opened Friday with a record list of entries, has been indefinitely postponed because of the strike of maintenance workers in Greater Victoria schools.

Possible re-scheduling of the festival for early May has been discussed but this is tentative as many factors, such as availability of adjudicators and other commitments of students and teachers affect the decision.

Cougar Lines Strongest

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The game at the Memorial Arena dogs might be considered a tie by some but the one on the ice Tuesday was more decisive as Victoria Cougars defeated Saskatoon Blades 6-2 in a Western Canada Hockey League game.

If disruption was the aim, striking members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees enjoyed some measure of success by delaying the start of Tuesday's game for 18 minutes.

But CUPE's bolstered picket line didn't deter hockey fans from entering Memorial Arena.

The announced crowd of 3,423 is the largest for any mid-week WCHL game in the Arena this season.

Victoria manager-coach Pat Ginnell asked referee Al Paradise to delay the game 15 minutes in order to allow late-arriving fans to enter the Arena.

On the ice, Ginnell's Cougars had no problems. The Western Division leaders opened strongly and carried on for a clear-cut victory over the East leaders. The win gives Victoria a record of three victories, a tie and two losses in six games against Saskatoon.

Combined with Medicine Hat's 4-4 draw with Lethbridge Broncos, the result allowed Cougars to move nine points ahead of the second-place Tigers.

Scoring leader Mel Bridgman, with his 53rd and 54th goals, again paced the Cougars. Dan Lucas added his 49th and other singles went to Don Cairns, Rick Peter and Rick Martin.

Del Chapman scored twice for Blades while Neil Hawryliw added the other.

Bridgman also picked up an assist to run his point total to 127, two more than Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge. Trottier also had a three-point night in the tie at Lethbridge.

The Cougars, outshooting Saskatoon 46-24, also didn't have any problems with Bill Oleschuk. The lanky Saskatoon netminder was the main reason Blades were able to tie Victoria 2-2 here Saturday.

Tuesday, Oleschuk turned out to be a mere mortal. He didn't have all the answers, as he did on Saturday. As a matter of fact, Cougars counted two tainted goals against Oleschuk.

Cairns and Peter both got their goals when their intended passouts from behind the net glanced into the goal off Oleschuk's equipment.

Victoria's superiority was evident from the start. The Cougars outshot the slow-starting Blades 18-4 in the first period, stretched a 2-0 lead to 5-1 early in the third, and breezed home easily.

The Cougars might have made it more convincing but for penalties in the final period. The Cougars took all four minors called by Paradise in the third. All four came after Victoria took its 5-1 lead.

In all, Cougars took 10 minors and a major while Blades took six minors and a major in a game handled well by Paradise.

The Blades, already missing veteran centre Ralph Klassen because of illness, suffered another jolt early in the game when defenceman Rick Smith sustained a minor concussion.

In other games Tuesday, New Westminster Bruins pulled into a third-place tie with Kamloops by defeating Calgary Centennials 3-2 while the Chiefs were dropping a 5-3 verdict to Brandon Wheat Kings.

A Smash Hit! Now What To Do for an Encore?

Hey, you just gotta dig that Paddy Ginnell. The owner-manager-coach of the Cougars topped himself Tuesday. Because that was one hell of a promotion he came up with at Memorial Arena.

Imagine! A hockey game with about 60-75 pickets outside the arena; police too; more officers inside; the odd hassle, at least one punch in the nose; TV cameras whirring; a threat of a blackout; broken keys jammed in locks; glue in a lock; other heavies from the constabulary in civvies; and then, to clinch it: thirty-four hundred hockey fans in the building. And all of them "non-union". Maybe!

The occasion was a meeting of the divisional leaders in the Western Canada Hockey League, the Cougars of the West, and Saskatoon Blades from the East. They had played to a 2-2 tie Saturday and this promised to be a dilly. And if mid-week crowds all season hadn't been that great, the afternoon newspaper put the icing on the cake.

For there on Page 1 was the feature story. The striking Canadian Union of Public Employees would jump their usual picket force of four or five at the arena to 60.

"Push Mounts for Arena Shutdown," the headline said. Well, that sold it. If the regular fans would come anyway, now there was a double bill with the hint of maybe more action. So people came to see and stayed to watch the game.

The CUPE complaint is that the arena is catering only to professional sports while their dispute with the city (and other municipalities) has some people on strike and others locked out, and that "thousands of our children are being deprived of junior hockey, ice skating, figure skating, and other public recreation..." or so the handbill said, among other sundry items.

But these points could be argued ad infinitum and ad nauseum, and that isn't the purpose here.

What is, is that Ginnell engineered a masterpiece. He somehow got CUPE to step up the pressure on the arena and naturally it followed: that stepped up the crowd.

Oh, there was some whistling and shouting on front friends of the pickets were recognized as entering the arena, and some shoving, but not too much. At the car lot there were some brushed past legs, dented fenders, and bruised feelings. And even some placard carriers looked as if they really didn't feel they belonged where they were (Earlier in the dispute it had been noted that some pickets, once their job was done, had disposed of their signs and stayed to see the closing stages of the game in progress. But that's only hearsay.)

Of course, Ginnell was ecstatic. The start of the game even had to be held up to accommodate the fans; things had worked out so well. Then during the contest policemen patrolled the mezzanine and also the lower corridors and fortunately without incident.

But unbeknownst to the fans, at least most of them, was the threat of a blackout. Assistant manager John Bate revealed afterwards that there had been a report that an attempt would be made to cut off electrical power to the building at 9:30. Fortunately it was just a rumor, because imagine the chaos and panic that would have ensued.

By game's end the pickets had dispersed and who could blame them. After all, they had done their job, and it was cold outside.

Meanwhile, Bate found that someone had attempted to jam the locks on the front doors of the arena and also the locks on the gates to the parking lot. A jammed key broken off, was found in one parking lot lock, and something that resembled glue in another. Thanks to a hacksaw and a tube of graphite, Bate and his assistants managed to offset this delaying tactic. Experienced observers felt this wasn't worthy of Ginnell and didn't fit his modus operandi either.

And the game. Well! Ginnell scored there too. His Cougars were right on target, waxed the Blades 6-3, in an exciting and well-played contest that was actually closer than the final score indicated, the Blades only giving away in the final period.

So now the Cougars play again on Saturday before embarking on a road trip. And whether or not Ginnell plans a repeat performance with the aid of CUPE remains to be seen.

But one thing is certain. If he does, they'll have to go some to top Tuesday's show.

This was a smash hit, and crowd of 3,423 was the biggest mid-week house of the whole season.

Morgan Suffers Blood Poisoning

Victoria Scorpions, tied 2-2 in their best-of-five series against Vancouver Capitanos for the combined B.C. championship and Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League playoff title, received some bad news Tuesday.

Dave Morgan, the team's third-highest scorer, has blood poisoning as a result of a floor burn suffered on his right leg during the fourth game of the series Sunday at Vancouver's John Oliver High School.

Scorpion manager Dave Henson said it was the second case of blood poisoning involving the same gymnasium. He said Alex Devlin of Richmond Ramblers suffered an identical mishap in the semi-final series against Capitanos.

Morgan is taking anti-biotics and hopes to be ready in time for the deciding game Sunday at 11 a.m. in the UVic McKinnon Building.

Other injured players — Brian MacKenzie, Chris Hall and Walt Burrows — are expected to play. MacKenzie has a pulled groin muscle, Hall is recovering from a dislocated shoulder and Burrows is "on the mend" from torn knee ligaments.

Pair of Fights By New Bruin Earns Praise

By The Canadian Press

Hank Nowak didn't take long to fit in with the big, bad Boston Bruins.

Playing in his third game for Boston, he scored one goal and got into two fights Tuesday night while the Bruins were beating Pittsburgh Penguins 6-4 in a National Hockey League game.

"You can't do better than that," said Boston coach Don Cherry, summing up the performance of Nowak, just acquired from Detroit Red Wings.

"He scored the winning goal and had two fights. And he took on a pretty good one in Bob Kelly."

In Tuesday's other NHL games, Toronto Maple Leafs clubbed Minnesota North Stars 9-2, New York Islanders shut out St. Louis Blues 3-0 and Chicago Black Hawks whipped Washington Capitals 6-2.

Nowak was playing on a line with NHL scoring leader Phil Esposito.

"I haven't practised with the line yet but I talked to Esposito before the game," he said. "He told me where he'd like me to play and where he plays."

"They've always been the big bad Bruins. I hope I'll be a big bad Bruin."

Oak Bay Ties Ribbon On Perfect Campaign

Oak Bay Bays capped their most successful league season in the past three years Tuesday night by tripping Reynolds Roadrunners 89-62 during the final slate of games in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

The Don Horwood-coached Bays finished unbeaten after 13 games after compiling 12-1 records during each of the past two seasons, when they also took league titles.

In other action, Mt. Douglas Rams topped Claremont Spartans 85-54, Victoria Totems mauled Parkland Panthers 82-44, Belmont Braves downed Dunsuir Demons 79-57 and Spectrum, easily the most improved team in the league, rolled over Esquimalt Dockers, 89-79.

Steve Pescod, the team captain, led the B.C. champion Bays with 21 points while Greg McInnis had his best hammering in 30 points in an officially finish as the top scorer in the league with a total of 238 points. Larry Dziel of Bays scored 10 points to boost his total of 227, second highest for the season.

Spartans and Demons finished in a tie for fourth place and the final playoff spot in Division "A". A sudden-death playoff game, starting at 6 tonight at Parkland, will decide the issue.

The lower Island tournament is scheduled to start Thursday night.

Spectrum, paced by the 22-point productions of Gord Gummer and Roy Gerath, capped a successful first season under the guidance of coach Rick Mark. The team finished with a 7-6 record, third place in Division "B" and a berth in the playoffs. Last season, as Mount View Hornets, they were winless in 14 starts.

Ben Shotton fired 26 points to pace the Dockers.

It's been a long season for Chicago Cougar coach Pat Stapleton, but Tuesday night he got a break.

"At least the overtime periods are getting shorter," he said after the Cougars had beaten the Edmonton Oilers 4-3 with a goal from Gary MacGregor 11 seconds into overtime in a World Hockey Association game.

The victory was the fourth in a row for the Cougars, who still remain five points behind Cleveland Crusaders in their battle for a playoff position in the Eastern Division.

In other WHA games, New England Whalers edged Vancouver Blazers 3-2, Indianapolis Racers defeated Baltimore Clippers 6-4, Toronto Toros beat San Diego Mariners 6-4 and Minnesota Fighting Saints and Winnipeg Jets tied 6-6.

Nick Fotiu and Don Blackburn scored in the final period to propel New England past the Blazers. Fotiu's goal, only his second of the season, snapped a 1-1 tie, and Blackburn made it 3-1 just two minutes later.

UVic's Basketball Bedbugs Get There

There's an old ditty about the butterfly that flits on wings of gold, the firefly wings of flame and the bedbug that has no wings at all but gets there just the same.

And up at UVic there's a basketball team called the Vikings, that have no superstars at all but, like the bedbug, they got there just the same.

The Vikings, who weren't supposed to get anywhere this season, got all the way to first place in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league and stayed there. As a result, they're playing UBC Thunderbirds in a best-of-three playoff final for the league championship. It starts Friday night at 8:30 at the McKinnon Building and continues Saturday at 8:30 and, if necessary, Sunday at 2:30.

Sunday could produce a nifty doubleheader if the college series goes the limit because Victoria Scorpions and Vancouver Capilanos meet in the deciding game of the B.C. Senior "A" finals at the McKinnon gym beginning at 11 a.m.

"When the season began, Jack and I took the approach that we'd work very hard with a young ball club, looking toward next year and the year after," Taylor revealed Tuesday.

SCHOOL SPORTS

jim crerar

At what point, then, did the coaches realize they wouldn't have to wait until next year?

"When we played our first two games in Edmonton," Taylor replied, Vikings dropped both their season openers to Alberta Golden Bears but apparently showed enough potential to prompt a reassessment.

Taylor's suspicions were confirmed the following weekend when Vikings reeled off two victories against Calgary Dinos and embarked on an 11-game winning streak. By the end of the schedule, Vikings had won nine of 10 at home and five of 10 on the road, their best record ever both home and away.

The one game that made the difference was Vikings' overtime win against UBC Saturday, Feb. 8. It was a comeback to end all comebacks.

Humiliated 73-47 the night before by the T-Birds, UVic trailed 57-50 with a minute remaining in regulation time. A furious full-court press, however, netted Vikings eight points and pulled them even at the end of regulation time. They won it 64-63 in the extra period.

Long on rookies and short on height and experience, how did the Vikings pull it off?

"We've played together as a team," explained Taylor. "We've had good scoring distribution in Jim Duddridge, Dave Mulcahy and Lee Edmondson and our rebounding has been evenly distributed among the same three players."

"We have the best defensive record in the league, too. The one thing that has improved our defence is that we're quick. Robbie Parris, Bert Zethof and Dale McDonald have good quickness at guard and so has forward Lorne Dakin. You have to be quick to succeed in college ball."

Parris, a freshman from Oak Bay and the shortest man on the team at five feet, eight inches, is a slick ball handler with big-league moves. He has become the signal caller.

But balance is the key with the Vikings. Taylor can pick his starting five out of eight players and any of them can have a big night.

"The kid that has really played well for us recently is Mulcahy," he said. "He's picked up some of the slack among the forwards. Edmondson has looked good the last four or five games, too."

But if the coach had to single out one major difference this year, he'd go to his backcourt men, including Parris, Zethof, McDonald and Doug Moser, all freshmen except Zethof.

"We've really put the emphasis on defence," Taylor explained. "We've devoted a lot of practice time to it. That's the part of the game that never changes. You can have an off night shooting, but the defence should be constant. It will tell the story this weekend against UBC."

Zethof will be assigned to check UBC's Steve Pettifer, the league scoring champion, while Pard Hogeweide and Evan Jones, as good a defensive player as any in Taylor's estimation, will attempt to keep Blake Iverson in check.

Vikings are yielding height and experience to the T-Birds, but they haven't been badly beaten in rebounding by anyone this year. If they can keep their cool, keep up on the boards and play up to their defensive capabilities, they'll be tough.

This one is a classic matchup: two rival schools playing for the championship; a good little team against a good big team; a team stressing balance and defence against a team of superstars. Should be fascinating.

Forest Service Directive Stresses Need for Strips

"It should be apparent the forest industry must accept and overcome in a workmanlike way the challenges of planning and creating satisfactory protective strips, if it expects to economically continue cutting and removing timber from the forest."

Such a statement might not be too out-of-place in a submission by some conservation group.

But it is actually the summation of a directive which went out to all logging licencees and operators within the Vancouver forest district last year from district forester H. M. (Mickey) Pogue, stressing the need for all companies to observe a form of greenstrip policy.

It doesn't appear to be a new approach by any means, but the directive stresses certain aspects which were incorporated in the logging guidelines issued previously to all coastal operations.

Nevertheless, it emphasizes several points and places the onus for environmental damage directly on the industry.

"It shall be explained that the cost and consequences of improper planning or operation will henceforth be borne entirely by the forest industry."

Further along the directive states:

"The intent of the forest service administration is to clarify the extent and composition of an acceptable protective strip including trees left standing, which will not be subject to assessment for waste. The forest industry faces penalties, including suspension, possible prosecution and costly delays involving complicated corrective operations for contravention of the stream, stream-bed and lake protection terms and conditions."

Depending on the site and various other factors, some of this leave strip must be logged to conform to a management plan, providing the removal methods are designed to leave, in an undamaged condition, a well scattered cover consisting of the remaining trees, brush and undergrowth over the entire width of the protective strip, with negligible ground and soil disturbance."

Getting specific, this can be accomplished by ensuring no tree is felled into water or skidded within the highwater level of any stream channel, "and no tree or log can be yarded unless it can be either lifted clear of the ground before it is moved, or high-leaded out in the direction in which it was pointing before being moved."

Streamsides abuse on the Cowichan

Furthermore, the logs can only be moved out in a track clear of obstructions or trees and shrubs which are approved to be left standing in an undamaged state.

This doesn't mean, however, that the entire strip will be logged in this highly-selective manner.

"A stream for instance, could be passing through immature forest, which is not cut, or through a canyon, or past a steep-sided cutbank. In other circumstances a section of the stream might consist of intensively-used spawning gravel or flow through an area being used for forest recreational development."

It's nice to see other values are at last receiving their fair share of consideration by the government branch directly responsible for administering logging regulations.

And, I'm glad they are taking a flexible approach to green strips rather than trying to enforce rigid boundaries around completely untouched terrain, which isn't really feasible in this type of country.

NIBBLES: Two cities in the United States have come up with a rather unique method of getting rid of their sewage sludge ... They're turning it into an export item ... Chicago's sanitary district is negotiating the sale of some six million tons of sludge to Ghana for use as fertilizer and Pennsylvania officials are talking to the Bahamian government about the shipment of 1.6 million tons of sludge from Philadelphia for farm use.

MONTREAL (CP) — Marv Luster, 36, a 14-year veteran linebacker of the Canadian Football League has announced his retirement.

Luster, who spent nine seasons with Toronto Argonauts and the other five with Montreal Alouettes, was an Eastern Conference all-star six times.

TONYS CRITICIZED

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (Reuter) — New Zealand softball coach Rusty Hay today criticized the on-field behaviour of visiting Canadian softball team, Oshawa, Ontario, Tony's during the exhibition games on the weekend. He described it as the worst he had ever seen.

Hay said the Canadians, beaten 7-2 and 2-1 by New Zealand in a doubleheader, frequently shouted and swore at the umpires.

"I hope I never see such petulance, bad manners and downright bad sportsmanship again," he said. "I've seen a lot of softball and I've seen players upset but never to that extent."

Regina Rink Undeclared

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Mari Mitchell's Regina rink, defending the Canadian women's curling championship won the last six years by Saskatoon area clubs, appears headed for a showdown tonight with Alberta.

The Saskatchewan foursome racked up its fifth consecutive win Tuesday night, hanging an 11-6 defeat on Ontario's Bea Cole of London.

But Miss Mitchell, a 26-year-old social worker, isn't about to forecast a sweep for the Prairie rink, especially with games today against the popular host New Brunswick entry skipped by Ivy Lord of Saint John and Sharon Grigg's Medicine Hat club.

Sharon, with four wins in five starts here, has the best chance to throw a wrench into Saskatchewan's domination of the championship that goes back to 1969 when Joyce McKee started the provincial sweep.

In other Tuesday night games, Gail Hiscok of St. John's cracked five in the fourth to lift Newfoundland to a 12-5 win over New Brunswick. Diane Blanchard's Prince Edward Island crew from Charlottetown registered its first win, 9-8, over Joan Mogk of Souris, Man.; Marion Radcliffe's Kelowna, B.C. club took Lee Tobin's Quebec foursome from Montreal 9-4, and Alberta easily handled the Phyllis MacDonald Nova Scotia representatives from Halifax, 10-2.

In the afternoon draw, it was Quebec 8, Ontario 7; Newfoundland 8, Nova Scotia 6; British Columbia 14, New Brunswick 3; Alberta 5, Manitoba 4; and Saskatchewan 8, P.E.I. 5.

He had been jogging to raise funds for mental health programs and had hoped to reach the Atlantic coast by the end of April. But he ran into one of the worst winter blizzards in a decade in Saskatchewan and froze both his feet. He continued his jog but froze his feet again twice in Manitoba.

Bulls Break Jazz Streak

By The Associated Press
Chicago Bulls cooled off the surprising New Orleans Jazz, stopping their six-game winning streak 120-105 in a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

"This is a league of consistency, not streaks," said Bill van Breda Kolff, coach of the Jazz, which has a 14-46 record. "So we'll just have to get back together and work hard."

In Tuesday's other NBA games, Kansas City-Omaha Kings topped Milwaukee Bucks 93-90, Washington Bullets whipped Buffalo Braves 111-93, Phoenix Suns trounced Golden State Warriors 111-97, Houston Rockets drubbed Cleveland Cavaliers 114-87, Portland Trail Blazers beat Philadelphia 76ers 99-77 and Seattle SuperSonics edged New York Knicks 102-101.

There were no games played in the American Basketball Association.

Chet Walker's 29 points, Norm Van Lier's 23 and Bob Love's 22 paced Chicago's balanced attack against New Orleans.

Nate Archibald scored 37 points to lead Kansas City-Omaha to its sixth win in a row, the 12 in their last 13 games.

A Bitter After-Taste to Baseball Arbitration

NEW YORK (AP)—Baseball's arbitration cases came to a close Tuesday, but their aftertaste lingers on. There were 15 arbitration cases this year. The record will show that the owners won nine of them.

Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew, the American League's leading hitter last year, lost in his arbitration battle. "I'm disgusted," Carew said. "Now I know what kind of organization the Twins are."

"I know what they think of me. They don't consider me a superstar. I'm just a number." Ralph Garr, the National League's top hitter in 1974, came here for an arbitration battle with Atlanta Braves.

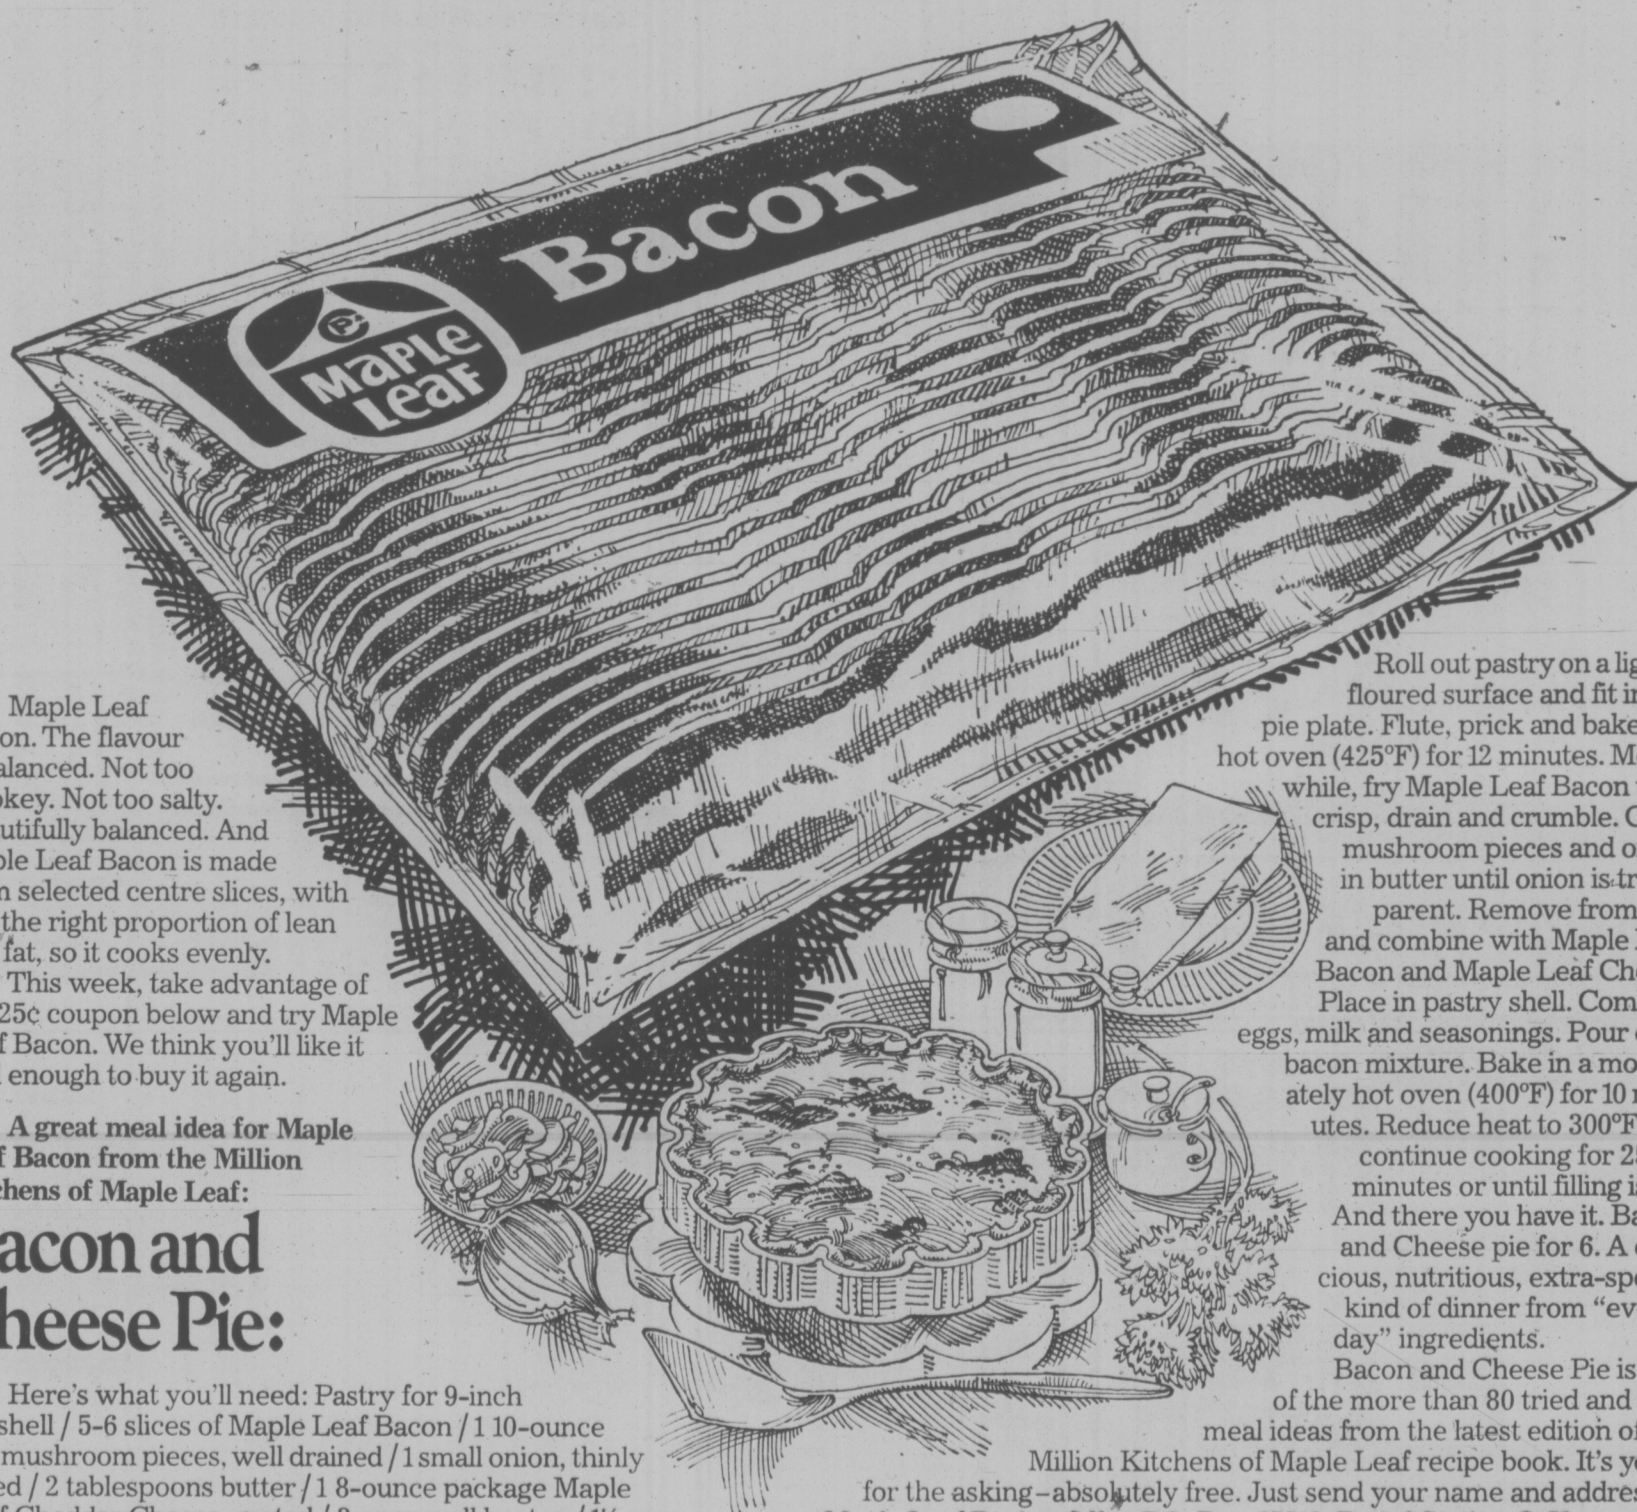

After Garr made his pitch, he asked the arbitrator if he could be excused. "I didn't want to hear myself get out on," Garr said. "They can cut you down so much that it makes you not want to play."

"I don't see how management can win these things," Garr added. "Win or lose there's gonna be a funny feeling for Ralph Garr towards Atlanta management." Garr won his case, receiving $114,500 for 1975 instead of the $85,000 the Braves felt he was worth.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, said some of the teams lose dignity by attacking their players.

Sonar Aid for Chlorine Probe

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Authorities today suspended the week-long hunt in the Strait of Georgia for four tank cars containing deadly liquid chlorine while they awaited the arrival of a new sonar device.

Three Canadian destroyer escorts equipped with submarine tracking gear returned to base Tuesday after combing a seven-mile stretch of the strait off Texada Island, about 50 miles north of Vancouver.

A ministry of transport spokesman said the Mackenzie, Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan "have pinpointed a few possible locations, but because of their equipment could not make it more definite."

MoT spokesman Des Allard said the locations were all a few miles off the northeast point of Texada Island, a sparsely populated area.

"We are awaiting a sonar device which takes a frontal view of things on the ocean floor," Allard said.

He said the search for the potentially deadly chlorine would be suspended for three or four days until the highly-sophisticated, sonar device was flown in from Halifax, N.S.

Allard said the environment ship Vector, which gave up Monday after a fruitless four-day search, may again be pressed back into service to carry the new equipment.

The MoT official noted all the specified locations involved depths of over 500 feet of water, at which the 340 tons liquid chlorine poses little danger to humans.

ART TRACKED DOWN

MONTE CARLO (Reuters) — Police have recovered stolen paintings worth $2,070,000 after a car chase through the streets.

The paintings, most of them stolen from a leading Paris gallery two years ago, were found in the trunk of a car used by a man arrested after the chase Tuesday. They included a Pissarro worth $414,000.

Police said the man they were holding had driven off at high speed with police vehicles in hot pursuit after he was seen near an art gallery in this Riviera resort.

The man broke both his legs when he jumped from an 18-foot terrace after abandoning his car, police said.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

The year's first foal to come to our attention was born last week at Hunt Valley farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Mearns.

The mare Jane W. and the sire, Fleet Runner, are both Thoroughbreds. The baby is a "boy."

No doubt Mrs. Mearns, who owns and rides the Open Jumper The Flying Nun with such success, will be watching the new arrival closely to see the first signs of his jumping ability.

Attention should be given to three instances when a different bridle is fitted to a horse or pony.

First, see that the browband is long enough to be free of the ears. Next, see that the throatlatch is loose enough to put a hand through. Finally, adjust the bridle so that the bit is held up in the corners of the mouth with only the suggestion of a wrinkle. Pull down on the bit to test that the bridle is holding the bit up there and not the horse by using its tongue.

Within a few weeks the grass will grow enough so that a horse will be able to crop off quite an amount in an hour or so of grazing.

If a horse or pony has been turned loose on pasture for an hour each day all winter, there will be no drastic change of diet and no harm should result.

However, changing a horse from a dry diet of hay and grain to one including grazing on a good growth of grass will probably cause problems.

When you decide to let your horse out at pasture do so for short periods at the start, say 15 minutes for a few days and then 25 minutes for a few more days until the animal's digestive tract has accepted the change.

Pony breeds are not able to accept lush pasture. The reason we come across so many foundered ponies is because of too much good food.

Almost without exception, ponies are too fat and if subjected to sudden exertion or work will founder and become useless. Care should be taken to subject fat horses and ponies to a gradual increase in their work as spring weather allows for longer rides.

Horses not carrying too much flesh will need an introduction to heavier work on an increasing scale, but there is less chance of trouble here than with gross animals.

There is an acknowledgement among horsemen that teaching a horse to do tricks reduces its ability to perform regular work to its fullest extent. When the limited size of a horse's brain is considered, the theory sounds reasonable.

We know of a mare that could and did hold her own in any company as an open jumper. When the mare was a yearling, she was taught to do tricks.

In her repertoire were retrieving a hat, playing with a football, counting by pawing with a front foot, shaking or nodding her head to indicate a negative or affirmative answer. These activities were kept up as the mare was put to work.

New owners were shown the cues to cause the mare to perform, and took great delight in showing off the mare. It was soon discovered, however, that the mare's jumping performances were well below par and strict measures were taken to determine the reason.

After a few months it was found that her jumping ability went down after a trick performance and returned after a few weeks away from the circus performances.

A gelding was taught to rear up on his hind legs when the loose end of the lead shank was flicked towards him by the handler standing directly in front of the horse.

Shortly after the horse was sold, a six-year-old child standing in front of the horse with a skipping rope accidentally gave the correct cue and the horse reared up. Losing its footing the horse fell from its upright position, knocking bystanders down. Fortunately no one was seriously hurt.

NANAIMO RAMPAGE PROBED

NANAIMO (CP) — Police Tuesday were investigating a weekend rampage here by youths.

R.C.M.P. Inspector Dan Webster said "some suspects have been identified and there is no question that charges will be laid."

He said the rampage may have started as a celebration of the impending wedding of one of the youths "but because of the individuals involved it degenerated into a nasty situation."

Several people were treated Saturday for cuts and bruises from fighting with youths who apparently struck at several hotel bars during the evening. Some witnesses said there were more than 30 youths involved.

An area businessman who asked to be unidentified, had his jaw broken in an altercation with the gang outside a night spot.

"Their language was atrocious and I suggested to them it was not proper to swear like that in front of the women," said the businessman. "The next thing I knew I was hit with something on the side of the head and as I staggered up and walked outside one of the group ran to a car, grabbed something from it and hit me with that."

"Then one jumped the other fellow I was with and beat him to the ground."

39% Fernie Gas Rate Hike Hit

CRANBROOK (CP) — Mayor Vern Uphill of Fernie told the B.C. energy commission Tuesday that a proposed 39-per-cent increase in Columbia Natural Gas Co. rates would severely effect the elderly in the Fernie area.

The mayor told the commission that those on fixed incomes might not be able to cope with the increase, adding that he cannot understand why Columbia Natural Gas needs the increase. Uphill said people living in Missoula, Mont., pay less for Alberta natural gas than do those in the East Kootenay.

Counsel for the company challenged the mayor's statement, but no figures were available on costs in Missoula compared with those in the East Kootenay.

Security Boats

MONTREAL (CP) — Alcan Canada Products Ltd. will be the official supplier of power boats to the 1976 Olympic

Welfare Holiday Halt

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)

Mayor Tom Reid ordered acting mayor Marc Howard to declare a 30-day freeze Tuesday on a council resolution that would have allowed immediate welfare payments to a man who went on a Mexican holiday while collecting welfare.

Council's resolution Monday would have allowed Angus Philip to receive temporary welfare payments.

Philip, whose visit to Mexico last year cost about $8,000, told council Monday that his family would be evicted Friday because the mayor had refused to authorize welfare payments. Council granted him temporary assistance to pay the back rent if the family's situation could be verified by the city clerk.

Philip spent most of an $11,050 auto accident settlement last June on the vacation.

A Bonus on the Way On Next Year's Tax

★ ROYALTY DELAY BID FAILS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government defeated an opposition attempt Tuesday night to delay implementation of its royalties-taxation plan until after the April ministers' conference.

The vote was 107 to 77 against the delay, proposed last Friday by Alvin Hamilton (PC — Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain).

Hamilton, joined in his plea by New Democratic Party and Social Credit MPs, said the plan should be delayed to give the provinces one more chance to argue their case against it.

The proposal would force oil, natural gas and mining companies to pay federal income tax on royalties they are charged by provincial governments.

The vote Tuesday night came during closing stages of clause-by-clause study of the government's omnibus income tax bill, covering tax changes announced in the Nov. 18 budget.

Bi-Bi Bonus Eyed

OTTAWA (EP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Tuesday the government is reviewing its policy of not paying a premium to public servants who speak both official languages in their duties.

He suggested, however, that it would be a major decision to change the policy.

Replying to questions from Social Credit leader /Real Caouette, Chretien noted that a seven percent premium had been paid to secretaries employed by Parliament, because of the need to attract bilingual employees.

It had not been the government's intention to extend the premium salary payment to public servants, he added.

Chretien said that he was aware of the problems in Montreal at unemployment insurance commission offices and said the government was reviewing the policy and hopes to find a solution that will be acceptable to everyone.

Loan Cost Level

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner offered little hope for an immediate decline in consumer loan interest rates despite declines in the rates banks charge their best corporate customers.

Questioned in the Commons Turner declared that when the bank prime rate rose four points, the cost of consumer credit went up only by about one to 1.5 points.

"In other words," Turner told the Commons, "the consumer loan rate moved far more slowly up, and it will move more slowly down."

Turner indicated that much the same thing has happened on small business loans.

He said the chartered banks had adopted a preferred rate for small business at his request but, as interest rates come down, that differential diminishes.

At the peak of interest rates, he said, the differential between the small business loan rate and the prime rate for other business was anywhere from 1.25 to 1.5 points. As the prime rate comes down that preferential diminishes.

Turner insisted it is not government policy to restrict consumer credit.

The finance minister also said the government does not intend to legislate a reduction in mortgage rates, because it wants to ensure a reasonable rate that will attract the amount of money into the mortgage market which, of itself, will start to reduce mortgage rates.

Sea Power Boosted

OTTAWA (CP) — The Navy League of Canada, the organization that runs the sea cadet program, has added its voice to calls for expansion of maritime defence forces.

a brief presented Tuesday to Defence Minister James Richardson said there is need for increased programs to maintain an adequate maritime defence capability.

Reserve military organizations have made similar statements recently.

The brief was presented by league president J. E. Koyl of Victoria and Robert Hendy of Toronto.

New Consumer Watchdog?

OTTAWA (CP) — A new national watchdog group, with sweeping investigative and subpoena powers, will be proposed to the government next month by the 24,000-member Canadian Federation of Independent Business.

John Bullock, federation president, said in an interview that the group's job would be to identify the power groups that create wage or price inflation, then recommended steps to neutralize their power.

He said the federation will present its proposal to the cabinet ministers who meet the federation in March in an effort to develop a consensus on an anti-inflation program. About 20 meetings are scheduled with business, labor and professional groups by touring teams of cabinet ministers.

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxpayers who borrow money to invest in stocks, bonds and securities, earning interest will be able to save up to $470 each this year because of an amendment to the Income Tax Act being proposed by Finance Minister John Turner.

If provinces follow through, there would be an additional tax saving, depending on tax rates in the various provinces.

Total maximum tax savings then would range from about $590 in Alberta to $670 in Manitoba.

The tax saving will involve income in the current year and the benefit to taxpayers will not arrive until they file 1975 returns early next year.

A finance department official said department economists estimate the government will be giving up about $50 million.

The income tax bill — the result of the budget tabled by Turner in November — is in the final stages of parliamentary consideration and is expected to be passed by the House this week.

The tax-saving plan is tied to a budget provision allowing individuals to deduct $1,000 of interest or dividend income beginning with the 1975 tax year.

The original budget proposal did not allow the tax saving through borrowing to invest.

The budget provision would have required that interest paid on loans be offset against interest or dividends earned when the loan is made to buy securities.

"This approach was proposed in order to eliminate the possibility that a taxpayer might simply borrow to generate interest or dividend income which would be free of tax, while at the same time deducting from his income the cost of borrowing the funds," Turner said in debate in the House.

Turner said he changed his mind and proposed to allow the tax break because of the effect of the provision on small businessmen and farmers.

The budget proposal did not distinguish between personal investments and those of a business nature.

Turner said the proposal would penalize those with businesses which are not incorporated and those who borrow to invest in rental housing.

The $1,000 tax-free provision for interest income goes into effect for the 1974 tax year — the year for which returns now are being filed — and the addition of dividend income in the tax-free provision begins with the 1975 tax year.

PM Letter Slap to Lang?

STEPHENSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Bette Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association, says she hopes a letter from Prime Minister Trudeau saying hospital abortion committees should have latitude in deciding when abortions are in order represents "a slap on the wrist" to Justice Minister Otto Lang.

Dr. Stephenson called a news conference Tuesday to release correspondence she exchanged with the prime minister last fall and this winter.

She has had a running feud with Lang who takes a strict view of Canada's abortion law. He ordered hospitals in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories last October not to take social or economic factors into account in deciding when abortions are warranted.

The law says committees of physicians in hospitals may authorize abortion when pregnancy endangers the life or health of a woman.

Prime Minister Trudeau's Dec. 16 letter says he does not favor a strict definition of the word health because he wants to leave "sufficient latitude for hospital abortion committees to make just decisions in the many borderline or unique cases which inevitably will arise in the course of a committee's deliberations."

The statement seems at variance with Mr. Lang's position and Dr. Stephenson was asked if she views it as a "slap on the wrist" for Lang.

"Yes, hopefully," she replied. She said that least one hospital in the Northwest Territories dismantled its abortion committee following Lang's memo last fall because of "fear" resulting from Lang's "intimidation."

As a result, she said, patients had to be flown to Edmonton for abortions.

PRIVATE POLICE

BELFAST (UPI) — Protestant extremists and the Irish Republican Army announced plans today for formation of their own police forces to keep order in Protestant and Roman Catholic neighborhoods.

The move threatened to return Northern Ireland to a situation whereby each side in the six-year sectarian conflict patrols its own neighborhoods and provides its own version of the rule of law.

A Belfast announcement from the Ulster Defence Association, a Protestant paramilitary army, followed a hint in the IRA newspaper in Dublin that a "community peace-keeping force" was necessary in Belfast's Catholic neighborhoods.

Marchand Cuts Job

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand resigned today as leader of the Quebec wing of the Liberal party, and he will be succeeded by Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

Marchand read his letter of resignation to a meeting of the Quebec caucus — held before a general party caucus.

He cited the heavy workload facing him in the transport department as the one reason for changing some of his additional political responsibilities.

He also said the Quebec wing of the party's currently in a strong position.

Marchand, 56, has been leader of the Quebec wing since 1966, a year after he entered Parliament.

He retained the position after Prime Minister Trudeau succeeded Lester Pearson.

The job has never been clearly defined, but generally the Quebec leader is responsible for the party's political organization in the province and is the spokesman for the Quebec caucus.

One Quebec MP said there was no formal announcement that Lalonde would succeed Marchand, but it was clear to caucus that Lalonde would assume some, if not all, of the responsibilities.

He spoke immediately after Trudeau paid tribute to the work done by Marchand, and there were repeated references to the health minister in his new role.

Net Tightens On Phnom Penh

Times News Services
PHNOM PENH — Rebel troops have captured Cambodia's former royal capital of Oudong in six days of fierce fighting, smashing a new link in the crumbling defense line around Phnom Penh.

Government troops abandoned Oudong, 18 miles northwest of Phnom Penh, Tuesday despite orders to hold the war-torn city at all costs military sources reported.

They said Col. Hang Yiv, governor of Oudong, died at his command post in the battered city, which was levelled in fighting between government and guerrilla forces last year.

The sources said the bloodied defenders of Oudong fell back to Longvek, a town 21 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

The fall of Oudong tightened the insurgent stranglehold around Phnom Penh on the eve of a massive, Berlin-style U.S. airlift of food to the blockaded Cambodian capital.

With Phnom Penh threatened with a rice shortage and amid accusations that Chinese merchants are hoarding grain to push the price up, about 200 Cambodian students ransacked Chinese shops and beat up the owners in the city's southern market this morning.

Police dispersed the students, but they went on to attack two other markets.

Starting Thursday, a fleet of commercial jets is expected to fly 17,500 tons of rice to Phnom Penh over 30 days in an estimated 15 flights a day.

The United States has already been flying fuel and ammunition to Cambodia's armed forces.

The guerrillas have cut all the capital's river and road supply routes, leaving the U.S. airlift as the only way to meet the city's daily needs.

546 tons of rice, 300 tons of fuel and 600 tons of ammunition.

In Washington, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told a news conference Tuesday Cambodia would fall "in the next few weeks" without additional U.S. military aid.

However, Democratic leaders in the House of Representatives say they doubt President Ford's request for more military aid will win approval.

Ladders Too Short For Jets

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Ministry of Transport fire trucks at Vancouver airport do not have ladders long enough to reach the top of the new big jets, Dan McKenzie (PC — Winnipeg South Center) charged Tuesday.

The MP who has long been questioning the safety checks of the Ministry of Transport and safety practices of the airlines said he had been informed privately of the situation at Vancouver.

"In the event of a fire breaking out at the airfield in the upper deck or in the upper part of the body of a Lockheed 1011 the ladders are inadequate," he said.

Earlier, in the Commons he said he was alarmed by the rising fatality rate recorded by airlines abroad.

In the United States more than twice the number of passengers and crew lost their lives in 1974 compared with 1973.

He wanted to ensure that this rising rate did not spill over into Canada's air industry, he added.

"We have been fortunate so far but a number of recent occurrences have given rise to a growing belief that the transport ministry is not doing its job as far as air safety is concerned," he complained.

Bitter Issue of Kashmir Finally Laid to Rest

NEW DELHI (WP) — After 28 years of bitter discord and two years of intensive negotiations, Sheikh Mohammed Abdullah and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi announced Monday that they have at last put the issue of Kashmir to rest.

Abdullah has given up his protracted battle for self-determination. A plebiscite to determine whether Kashmir should be aligned with Pakistan, a Moslem nation, or India, a secular country with a Hindu majority, "has been rendered irrelevant," he said. Kashmir is the only state in the country with a Moslem majority.

In return for acquiescing, the 70-year-old Abdullah will be sworn in Tuesday as the chief minister of the state, resuming leadership after 22 years, most of it spent in detention.

He will eventually get back his former title of "wazir-e-azam." Urou for prime minister. This reflects Kashmir's unique position as the only Indian state with its own constitution.

Gandhi, who announced the accord in parliament, stressed that the settlement was "an entirely domestic matter." This comment was seemingly intended for Pakistan's Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Pakistan and India have gone to war three times over Kashmir and

ABDULLAH

Bhutto has called for a general strike in Indian Kashmir this Friday to protest the accord. Pakistan controls one third of the original princely state.

Apparently by coincidence, Gandhi addressed parliament just hours before the U.S. announced that it was lifting its 10-year-old embargo on arms supplies to Pakistan.

Officials were withholding comment on the end of the ban until the government conveyed its reaction to parliament Tuesday. However, Gandhi has recently protested against the resumption of military aid on the grounds that Pakistan has used U.S. weapons against India in the battles over Kashmir as well as in Bangladesh.

Simultaneously, Soviet Defence Minister Marshal Andrei Grechko, who arrived in New Delhi Monday morning, met with India's minister of defence, Sardar Swaran Singh. The Soviet Union is India's prime weapons supplier. Grechko, who is accompanied by the chiefs of the Soviet air force and navy, is to see Gandhi Tuesday and sources said they will undoubtedly discuss U.S. arms to Pakistan.

A foreign ministry spokesman said India's displeasure over the resumption of military assistance was "based on more basic considerations than the quantum of arms" to Pakistan.

This remark, coupled with earlier warnings that India would respond to the lifting of the embargo with its own military buildup, portends a new period of tension between India and Pakistan, a new warmth between India and the Soviet Union.

And Kashmir itself, which has been at the core of Indo-Pakistani hostility for more than a quarter-century, could very well become the flash point once again.

The response this Friday, the Moslem sabbath, to Bhutto's call for a general strike will indicate how dissatisfied pro-Pakistan and Islamic conservatives are with the Abdullah-Gandhi agreement. About 80 per cent of the state's 4.6 million people are Moslems and a significant number of them favor unity with their brothers in Pakistan-held Kashmir, if not with Pakistan itself.

After Pakistan lost its eastern wing, now Bangladesh, to India in 1971, most Kashmiri Moslems seemed to believe that Pakistan was finished as a major power in the subcontinent.

But in the last year or more, Pakistan has emerged as economically the healthiest of the sick nations in the region. Now, with renewed U.S. military aid, Bhutto could once again emerge as a military challenger to India. At least, that's what Gandhi and a number of her senior ministers claim.

Bhutto himself has not allowed the Kashmir issue to die. He constantly refers to the fact that when the United Nations intervened in the 1948 war between India and Pakistan it demanded that a plebiscite be held to determine which way the people of Kashmir wanted to go.

India, which got two-thirds of the state following the U.N.-imposed cease-fire, refused to allow the vote, saying that the former ruler of the state had willingly acceded to India when Pakistan was partioned out of the subcontinent the year before.

Abdullah's shift into what Gandhi termed "the mainstream of national life" will undoubtedly erode somewhat the appeal of closer relations between Kashmir and Pakistan. The sheikh, who is still widely called Sher-e-Kashmir, or Lion of Kashmir, remains a popular figure in the state.

Corned Beef Traditions

Cooking corned beef is simple when the label reads "for oven roasting." The roast is placed on a rack in a shallow pan and cooked until fork tender. No cover nor water is needed. Corned beef for oven roasting is available in 2 to 4 lb. roasts.

Buttered green beans, cole slaw, rye bread and baked apples could complete the menu.

ROASTED CORNED BEEF WITH DILLY SWISS CORN CASSEROLE

3-4 lbs. corned beef for oven roasting
1/4 cup butter or margarine

1/2 cup chopped onion
2 1/4 oz. cans whole kernel corn, drained
1/2 cup chopped dill pickle
2 medium tomatoes, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
4 ozs. shredded Swiss cheese
Place corned beef on a rack in a shallow pan. Bake at 325 degrees F. about 2 1/2 hours or until fork tender. Melt butter in a 2 1/2 quart baking dish in the oven. Add onions and cook 2 minutes. Add corn, pickles, tomatoes and seasonings. Combine—sprinkle with cheese. Heat about 20 minutes at 325 degrees F.

Non-Sandwich Lunch For Brown Baggers

Bored lunch boxers and "brown baggers" and other noontime eaters agree that the familiar lunch routine can use some shaking up. To many, this could mean enjoying a "nonsandwich" lunch to provide a well-balanced meal that will contain the protein, minerals and vitamins necessary for good nutrition.

Here are ideas for three non-sandwich lunches. They provide all the needed nutrients and taste great too.

Pack a container with salad makings such as shredded lettuce or cabbage, a hard-boiled egg, a slice of cold meat and a wedge of cheese. Top it off with a few green onions, a green pepper ring and a small whole tomato. Carry the salad dressing in a small spice bottle. Include a fresh bun or fingers of cold toast, spread with processed cheese. Round out the lunch with grapes or a pear and handful of peanuts. Bring along a thermos of milk or buy a small carton.

Pack a selection of thinly sliced cold meats — luncheon meat, gold chicken and beef, for example. Wrap the slices of meat around wedges of cheese, celery sticks or even shredded lettuce. You can also dip these meat rolls into a relish or sauce brought in a little jar. Add a few fruit tarts, a thermos of cream soup, and a bottle of fruit juice.

Bring along a wide-thermos filled with chowder, stew, chili or baked beans. Add a buttered bun or piece of bread, a wedge of lettuce and carrot sticks. Complete the lunch with an apple and a small carton of milk or juice.

It might also be a good idea to include "goodies" in the lunch. You'll find that a few olives or pickles, a tiny packet of raisins, a couple of prunes or dried apricots, a few salted nuts, or peanut butter-stuffed dates will add that special something to the whole idea of carrying a lunch box or brown bag. Tuck in a little extra and you'll be famous for your lunches.

Just remember that refreshing foods, especially those containing protein, can reduce a tired feeling and even a simple meal change will give you a lift with more energy to face the afternoon. Everybody likes to find a few cookies in their lunch even if just for the afternoon break. From Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, come these two recipes for nutritious cookies.

PEANUT BALLS

1/2 cup peanut butter
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup water

By HILDA BEASTALL.

"The way to a man's heart is still through his stomach but the old saying has taken on a new meaning: the food you eat can endanger your heart, or protect it."

Today's column is being presented at the invitation of the Victoria Branch of the B.C. Heart Foundation. Much of the material is taken directly from literature supplied to me by the foundation.

The three recipes are from a leaflet available to interested readers from the local branch.

These recipes have been planned by scientists as one means of reducing risk of heart attack in susceptible people; the recipes should be used with the aid of another leaflet showing a fat-controlled, low cholesterol meal plan as a guide to satisfying and healthful meals.

It won't hurt any of us to keep to a normal weight, for Canadians as a whole are overweight at any age, from infants to oldsters.

The meals as outlined in available leaflets are low in animal (saturated) fats. These are the type of fats which tend to raise the level of cholesterol in the blood, the underlying condition in most heart attacks, the leaflets state.

Animal fats are listed as butter, cream (including sour cream), whole milk, meat, and the yolks of eggs.

Even people who show no evidence of having developed heart disease may be increasing the risk of a heart attack if their regular diet has been high in saturated fat and cholesterol, we are warned.

When you see the wide range of appetizing foods which can be used in controlled diets, you realize that usually only moderate change in eating habits will be needed.

More detailed information for salt-reducing diets and controlled calorie diets are obtainable from Victoria Branch of B.C. Heart Foundation on prescription from a doctor. These give details of quantities and kinds of permissible and forbidden foods.

The meals planned as suggestions for folks requiring specific guidance will remove a lot of guesswork from the early days of having to prepare special meals. The fear has been that a diet would fail to be completely nutritious if only the taboos were known to the patient and the family. It isn't good enough to just leave out the harmful food items without substituting suitable alternates. Your own doctor is the one to indicate the exact type of diet you require.

You can still eat well even though you decide to make moderate changes in daily eating habits to control the intake of cholesterol-rich foods. Here are two recommendations from the leaflets.

Eat no more than three eggs a week, including eggs used in cooking. Limit the use of shellfish and organ meats such as liver, kidney, heart, and sweet breads. Since liver is very rich in vitamins and iron, it should not be eliminated from the diet completely. A four-ounce serving once a week is suggested.

To control the amount and type of fat, use lean meat, fish or poultry and avoid deep fat frying. Use liquid vegetable oil which is rich in sunflower and similar, or margarine containing these vegetable oils.

The initial control of sodium (salt) intake is a forgetful-ting the salt shaker on the meal table. Salt addition (and sugar too if you think about it) is mainly a habit.

For a diet of stated sodium intake daily, you must have professional guidance, for not only salt from the shaker is involved, but the salts occurring naturally in so many of our good foods. And many natural salts are needed by the body to function efficiently.

This is a similar situation to a sugar-restricted diet which must take into account the natural sugars in fruits, vegetables and cereals when determining how much commercial sugar may be permitted.

The following three recipes are chopped from a leaflet for fat-controlled, low-cholesterol meals. These are not salt-free recipes, but are low in salt as you will notice.

TOMATO BEEF STROGANOFF

1 1/2 pounds flank or round steak
2 Tbsp vegetable oil
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 small clove garlic, mashed or minced

1 can (6 ounces) mushrooms
1 can tomato soup
1 cup buttermilk
6 to 8 drops Tabasco sauce
1 Tbsp Worcestershire

1/2 tsp pepper
1/2 tsp salt
2 Tbsp flour
1/4 cup cold water

Trim fat from meat; cut meat across grain in thin strips. Heat oil in large frypan; add meat, onion, garlic. Cook until meat is browned and onion golden. Drain mushrooms and add to meat. Combine soup, buttermilk, sauces, pepper and salt; pour over meat. Cover and simmer for 1 hour or until tender. Blend flour with water and add to beef mixture, stirring and cooking until smooth and thick. Makes 4 servings.

SEASONED BROCCOLI

1 (1-pound) bunch fresh broccoli, or 1 10-ounce frozen

1 Tbsp vegetable oil
1/2 tsp dry mustard
Salt and pepper
3 Tbsp water

1/2 tsp oil seed
Trim and wash broccoli if

Ground Beef Convenient

Many ground beef recipes can easily be doubled to feed a crowd. Dishes like chili con carne, meat balls and meat sauce for spaghetti all freeze successfully and can be reheated as you need them. If you are freezing one of these main dishes for family use, be sure not to overcook it. To speed cooling, place the pans of food in cold water. Choose a suitable container size for freezing. If you have a limited number of baking dishes, line the dish with a foil before adding the food. Cover tightly and freeze. Then unmold, rewrap and return the food to the freezer. Be sure to freeze foods immediately.

Freshly cooked ground beef dishes may be frozen for three months at 0° F. or lower. After this period, the quality of food may decline in flavor or appearance.

Borrow this "chile con carne" recipe from the far away Latin Americans. The chile is surprisingly quick to prepare and tastes as if it has been simmered for days. If you want to make a double batch, it is best to cook the meat in two lots and then combine with the rest of the ingredients.

To create your own Latin atmosphere dine late, cover your table with a bright table cloth or woven mats, use clay jugs and casseroles. Beer is usually served with very hot dishes, but you could also have wine. It is customary to place a large pile of "tacos" at each end of the table. (Tacos are crisp, cracker-like accompaniments made from corn). In addition you might serve fresh vegetable appetizers or tossed green salad. After dinner, offer a refreshing cooler for those unaccustomed to such spicy foods like sweetened limeade.

CHILE CON CARNE

1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
1½ pounds ground beef
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon oregano
2 10-ounce cans condensed tomato soup
2 14-ounce cans kidney beans
Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add beef and brown. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and simmer until thickened (about 20 minutes). 6 servings.

Fat in the Pan Is Worth Saving

With prices of all food staples rising including those of fats and oils, it may become necessary for us to use all available fats to advantage and not allow a scrap to go to waste.

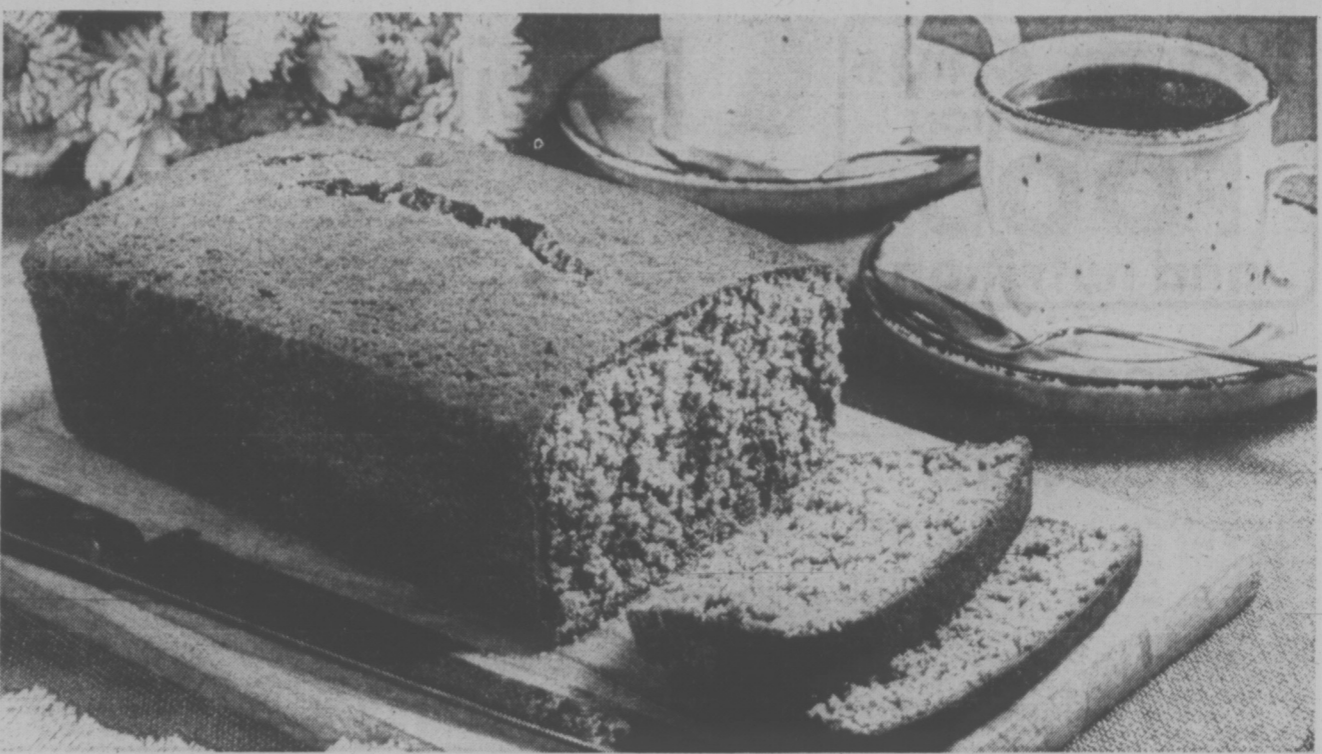

Rendering is the method used to extract raw fat from meat. The best results are obtained where the excess fat is removed from the meat before it is cooked. Scrape and wipe the raw fat with a clean damp cloth. Be sure to remove all the lean meat from it as it will spoil quickly.

Cut the fat into small pieces or put it through a food chopper, using a fairly coarse blade. Melt the fat in top of a double boiler or use a heavy iron pot over moderate heat. If you are using a heavy pot, use ½ cup hot water with each pound of fat and cook until the water has evaporated and the fat is free from bubbling and is clear. Rendered fats should be stored in tightly covered crocks, tin containers or opaque jars and refrigerated.

"Clarifying" is the method used to remove food particles from cooked fats. You need only clarify fats which are to be used in baking. Heat equal quantities of fat and water together for 10 minutes. Strain through a double thickness of cheesecloth and let cool. When cold, remove the cake of fat and scrape off any sediment adhering to the bottom.

Rendered beef fat is only suitable for pan-frying whereas rendered and/or clarified bacon, chicken and sausage fat are suitable for making low-fat baked goods such as muffins, biscuits, pancakes and popovers. Pork fat may be used in making pastry for meat pies or sausage rolls.

For 1 cup butter, substitute 1 cup pork fat or ¾ cup chicken fat. You should double the salt with the chicken fat. For 1 cup lard or shortening substitute ¾ cup pork fat or ¾ cup chicken fat.

Fruit Loaf Cake, By Request

down to the nub of the nutmeg, it isn't worth the broken finger nails.

APPLESAUCE LOAF CAKE

1½ cup stirred but unsifted cake and pastry flour.
1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg (preferably freshly grated)
1 tsp. allspice
½ cup shortening

1 cup sugar
2 eggs
½ tsp. vanilla

1 cup unsweetened applesauce (see below)
Make applesauce first:

Pare and core and quarter 2 medium-large cooking apples. Add ½ cup water and cook, covered, until tender. Beat with whip until smooth. Cool. Sift together the flour, soda, salt and spices. Cream together shortening and sugar until light. Beat in eggs and vanilla for about 3 or 4 minutes until pale and airy.

Fold in dry ingredients in thirds, alternately with applesauce.

Turn into a greased standard loaf pan, lined on bottom with greased wax paper. If teflon pan is used, wax paper lining is not necessary.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 50 minutes. Turn out on cake rack to cool.

This loaf has exceptionally good flavor if you grate your own nutmeg. It is economical. It freezes well. It is a good loaf for lunch packers. It is easy to make.

Now go ahead and make it. NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope.

Don't Let 'Food Faddist' Label Deter You From Sound Diet

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Just what is a "food faddist"? As with an overused term, it means different things to different people, and I, for one, would like to see it dropped from our general vocabulary.

For example, many persons—including some nutritionists—consider all vegetarians to be "faddists," completely ignoring the fact that a vegetarian diet can provide excellent nutrition, provided it includes sufficient milk or milk and eggs, as consumed by "lacto-vegetarians" and "lacto-ovo-vegetarians."

A good case in point is Frances Moore Lappe's generally well-balanced "Diet for a Small Planet," which has been called "faddist," presumably because it rejects meat. Seventh Day Adventists, a lacto-vegetarian group, have been shown to be a healthier group than the U.S. population as a whole. (Also, they do not drink or smoke.)

If you patronize a health food store, even if your only reason for going in is to get a better selection of dried beans, you might as well accept the fact that for many of your contemporaries you're a "faddist." If you're concerned about pesticide residues, the environment or the safety of certain food additives, you're very likely to be labelled a "faddist," despite the fact that your environmental concerns are shared by many of the best scientists and that the FDA as well as other United States government agencies are re-examining the safety of nitrites, food colorings and certain other additives.

The "faddist" label is applied to disbelievers and believers alike. For instance, those who continue to oppose fluoridation of water, despite the strong evidence that the addition to our water of minute quantities of fluoride necessary to prevent tooth decay is perfectly safe, are scorned as "faddists."

I believe that those opponents of fluoridation are misinformed, but are they "faddists?" On the other hand, those who enthusiastically endorse the teachings of nutritionists by avoiding the empty calories of sugar and alcohol and insisting on whole-grain breads, brown rice and fresh or lightly-processed foods, also are considered "faddists." Oddly enough, the term is never applied to those who disregard the basics of good nutrition. You may be killing yourself by over-consumption of eggs, milk, ice cream and well-marbled steaks—foods that can send your weight and blood cholesterol soaring—and nutritionists will call you mistaken or even foolish, but not a faddist.

Obviously, such a catch-all label can prove very bewildering to the average person who simply wants to know more about good nutrition. To help you judge the soundness of nutrition writing, I would like to suggest five rules of thumb:

—Look carefully at the title. Be wary of writings that dispute the laws of nature, such as "Calories Don't Count" or "The Miracle of Vitamin P."

—Also be suspicious of suggestions that there is but one side to any complex, general problem, such as "The Unalloyed Blessings of Food Technology."

—Beware of promised miracles. Does the "expert" claim he can cure a hitherto incurable chronic disease, such as arthritis, with diet? Does he contend you can shed pounds without effort or that he can bring you the fountain of youth? Even the best nutrition cannot work such miracles!

—Look for documentation. Does the writer cite evidence? How recent is this evidence? Can you find the original article yourself?

—Double check the claims. What do other informed writers have to say on the subject? This can be a very important guide to the soundness of a particular point.

—Look at the writer's qualifications. Is he or she actually doing research in nutrition or teaching it at an advanced level? If not, do the statements hold up under the scrutiny of authorities in the field? Remember also that a physician is not necessarily a nutritionist, and that a nutritionist is not necessarily an expert in food technology, toxicology or environmental science.

Above all, there is no point in being a food fanatic. There are many things we do not know about foods and nutrients, and it's quite possible that today's odd "fad" may be tomorrow's accepted fact. If we must use the word "fad," let's go back to the dictionary definition: "a practice or interest followed for a time with exaggerated zeal."

If the word "faddist" is used at all, it should apply only to those who embrace a new idea supported by inadequate evidence or who refuse to acknowledge a fact, regardless of the adequacy of the evidence. Personally, I'm swearing off the word altogether!

SOME TIPS ON SWEETENERS AS SUGAR SUBSTITUTES

If you've been wondering about using sweeteners such as honey, corn syrup and molasses in place of sugar, here are some tips.

Honey can be used to replace sugar for cooking and baking. Substitute one cup of honey for one cup of sugar and reduce the liquid by one-quarter cup. In plain cake recipe, replace only one half the sugar with honey. Since some baked goods made with honey brown more quickly than those made with sugar, use a slightly lower oven temperature. One advantage of using honey is that it helps retain moisture in baked products. But at present prices, honey won't provide stiff competition for sugar.

Corn syrup is a product of cornstarch, used commonly in sauces, candies, frostings, frozen desserts, punches, marinades and glazes for meat, fruit and vegetables. Using this syrup instead of sugar for baking won't save you money. Corn syrup is only half as sweet as sugar and so you will need double the quantity, making it less economical than sugar.

Molasses is a good buy when it comes to sweeteners but the strong flavor of this sugar by-product prohibits its use in many recipes. To replace one cup sugar, use one cup molasses plus ¼ to ½ teaspoon baking soda and cut the liquid in the recipe by ¼ cup. For best results, substitute only half the amount of sugar called for in the recipe.

Since honey, corn syrup and molasses are all liquid sweeteners, they require special handling. For easier pouring, measure these syrups in an oil measuring cup, unless the syrup is to be added to beaten egg whites.

Synthetic sweeteners can replace sugar as a sweetener in beverages although it's best not to overdo it. These sweeteners, however, are not considered sugar substitutes in baking because they don't provide the bulk and texture of true sugars in baked goods. Saccharin should not be used in baking as it results in a bitter product.

There's no saving in using brown sugar or icing sugar in place of white sugar. However, you can make use of any you have on hand. Icing sugar can't be substituted for sugar in baking satisfactorily. Instead use it for frosting or dustings on pastries. Brown sugar can replace white sugar on a cup for cup basis in baking and cooking. To measure accurately, pack brown sugar lightly into a cup so that it holds its shape when turned out.

Sugar is still the best and most economical all round sweetener.

No Dumping

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal fisheries department and the provincial Pollution Control Branch have ordered Brittain Steel Ltd. of New Westminster to suspend dumping of hog fuel.

An environment department spokesman said the company has been dumping its sawdust waste over the river side of the dike on the Fraser River. A fisheries biologist said hog fuel, used as landfill near a river, produces a leachate that is more toxic to fish than effluent from a pulp mill.

Food Guide for Balanced Diet

NUTRITION BUYLINE

Q: Is there some kind of list or plan I can follow to ensure that I buy foods to provide my family with a well balanced and nutritious diet?

A: The Daily Food Guide is the plan you want. It lists four food groups from which you plan your meals in order to provide the essential nutrients, such as protein, vitamins and minerals, for growth and normal health. It is important that you eat some foods from each group every day because eating too many foods from one group and not enough from another may create a nutritional problem such as Vitamin C deficiency. The Daily Food Guide can be obtained free from the Nutrition Services, B.C. Department of Health, Parliament Buildings, Victoria.

Q: Can the Daily Food Guide be used by everyone to plan their meals?

A: The Daily Food Guide is intended for use by basically healthy people. Those who require special diets for medical reasons (for example, diabetics) should consult their physicians.

Q: Is brown or white rice the better buy?

A: For better nutrition for your money, buy brown rice or converted white rice in preference to the ordinary white rice. Because of the milling process used to make the ordinary rice white and polished, the bran layers, which contain minerals and B vitamins are removed. This bran removal definitely lowers the food value of the plain white rice.

Q: Because of the difference in price, I have recently changed from serving my family orange juice made from frozen concentrate to orange juice made from crystals. How do they compare nutritionally?

A: Orange juice made from crystals may be less expensive than orange juice from frozen concentrate. Nutritionally, however, this is not a saving, for orange juice from frozen concentrate contains some calcium, iron, vitamin A, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and vitamin C, as well as other trace elements. Orange juice from crystals which are artificially flavoured contain only calories and vitamin C. In a 4 ounce serving made from crystals you get about 30 mg. of vitamin C. In a 4 ounce serving made from frozen concentrate you get 60 mg. of vitamin C.

Q: My local supermarket often sells slightly damaged fruits and vegetables at reduced prices. Does bruising etc. effect the nutritional value?

A: Although it may seem a saving to buy these fruits and vegetables, the damaged parts you must remove in preparation may offset the price reduction. When raw vegetables (except tomatoes) are damaged, an enzyme is liberated which destroys some vitamin C. Choose fresh looking vegetables, as wilting or change in colour indicates damage and a loss of vitamins.

Q: I have noticed that fancy grade canned fruits and vegetables are more expensive than choice and standard grades. Does this mean this grade is better nutritionally?

A: Appearance is the basis for grading and although the lower grade fruits and vegetables may not be of uniform size, firmness and colour, the nutritive value is still the same.

Q: I have heard that wieners are not worth buying. Is this true?

A: Contrary to the opinion held by some people, wieners are a good food and provide a fairly good amount of high quality protein. Compared to the cost of most other meats wieners are also inexpensive.

Q: Is the food value of pasteurized milk better than canned evaporated milk?

A: The nutritive qualities of canned evaporated milk are just as good as those of fresh pasteurized milk. It has the added advantage of being homogenized, of having vitamins C and D added and of being absolutely clean and inexpensive. Some people consider its flavour to be inferior to fresh milk while others think it is superior.

Q: Do I get any nourishment for my money from beer?

A: A glass of beer contains about 120 calories. It has only a trace of thiamine, riboflavin and iron, but provides some calcium and reasonable amounts of niacin. You could buy these same nutrients more economically in other food.

Low-Cal Cabbage Aids Digestion

One of the greatest cabbage-eaters of all time was Marcus Cato, Roman statesman and orator. Only his book on agriculture survives and five pages of it are devoted to the virtues of cabbage. "It is the cabbage which surpasses all other vegetables. It may be eaten either cooked or raw. If you eat it raw dip it into vinegar... Cabbage promotes digestion marvelously."

A head of winter cabbage may be round or oval, pointed or flat and white or reddish purple, depending on the variety. Cabbage is sold by the head or by the pound. The firmer and the heavier the head, the more eating it provides. Cabbage will keep well two weeks in the refrigerator, in a covered container or moisture-proof bag. A two-pound cabbage provides six servings.

Cabbage may be served many ways. Serve it in wedges to accompany corned beef as the familiar "boiled dinner." Use the leaves as a wrapper for a savory meat mixture in cabbage rolls, or shred it and add it to soup. If you are cooking cabbage, do so quickly. If cooked only until tender-crisp, cabbage retains much of its original, delicate flavor. Shredded cabbage requires only 6 to 8 minutes, wedges 10 to 15 minutes. When cabbage is done, season with salt and pepper and add one of these for variety — grated cheese, sour cream, caraway seeds, or curry.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Had today's deal been played in a rubber-bridge game, the normal game contract arrived at by South would have been fulfilled by every bridge player in the world. But when it arose in a duplicate game, most of the South declarers went down—because they took the proper duplicate percentage play! The hand illustrates one of the fundamental differences between rubber-bridge thinking and duplicate thinking.

Opening lead: Ten of ♦.

West's opening lead of the diamond ten was covered by dummy's queen and East's king, and taken by South's ace. Declarer next laid down the ace of trumps, leaving only the king outstanding. At rubber-bridge, there would be no problem whatsoever: declarer would concede a trump trick, a heart, and a club, thus fulfilling his contract.

tract. But at duplicate bridge the overtrick can be worth more than the game itself, since scoring is on a relative basis; if the odds appear quite favorable, the safety of the game contract should properly be jeopardized to obtain the overtrick.

The issue confronting declarer was, of course, who figures to have the nine of diamonds, East or West? If East has that key card, then dummy can be entered via the ace of clubs, and the finesse of declarer's eight of diamonds can be taken. On the ace of diamonds, dummy's singleton queen of hearts can now be discarded, thus eliminating a heart loser.

Now, honestly, doesn't East, who bid diamonds, figure to have the diamond nine? Wouldn't West have led the diamond ten from an original holding of the 10-2, the 10-4, the 10-5, the 10-6, or the 10-7?

So, at trick three, declarer played a club to the board's ace, after which he led dummy's three of diamonds. When East followed suit with the deuce, South inserted his eight-spot. As is evident, West captured the trick with his nine.

And so, when play had ended, declarer was down a trick, having lost one trick in each suit. Thus our declarer became a "goat," but if East had possessed the diamond nine, declarer would have been a hero.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're going to be busy with correspondence, general communications, advertising and questions pertaining to publication dates. One who advocates stimulating philosophy could become your "main ally."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish project. Get going in areas previously closed. You now have more appeal. You are more convincing. People are drawn to you and cheer your efforts. Mate or another close to you is willing to intelligently discuss finances.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY domestic adjustment now is of paramount importance. Emotional bruise will heal. February and November should be outstanding months for you in 1975. FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 3558 for the game today. One 3, two 5's, and one 8. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one to 10.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, $58+5-3$ is a solution for 60.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 91, with some "toughies" along the way. 61 and 89 may challenge even the expert. I shall be glad to check solutions.

MAKE EXTRA SAUCE WHILE BEEF CHEAPER

Supermarkets are currently featuring ground beef in various fat levels. Choose the one that suits you best and prepare a large potful of meat sauce. Double or triple our suggested recipe and freeze the extra sauce for another time. Remember that spaghetti must be cooked in rapidly boiling salted water, drained quickly, poured immediately onto a hot serving dish, served with a piping hot sauce and preferably on really hot dinner plates. Follow this advice and making superb spaghetti will never be a problem.

SPAGHETTI MEAT SAUCE
1 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons oil
1 pound ground beef
1 28-ounce can tomatoes
1 1/2-ounce can tomato paste

1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground oregano
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon crushed chili peppers

Saute onion and garlic in oil until onion is transparent.

Add beef and brown. Drain excess fat if necessary. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer uncovered 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Serve with spaghetti, 6 servings.

One serving equals 1 1/2 cups spaghetti with 3/4 cup meat sauce.

TUNA VOL AU VENT

1 6 1/2 oz can chunk light tuna.
1 can oyster stew.
1 pkt. frozen puff pastry. (Jus Roll).
1 tbs. oil.
3/4 cup celery, cut thinly across grain.
1/2 cup julienned green pepper strips.

1/4 tsp. sweet basil.

Roll out thawed puff pastry to about 3/4" thickness in an oval shape (round off the edges with a knife). Then cut partially through pastry about 1/2" in from side all the way around (The inside oval will form the lid in cooking). Bake on cookie sheet at 400 F. about 15-20 minutes until well-risen and golden. Cut off the lid which will have formed and scoop out any uncooked pastry so it leaves an empty shell. (This can be made a few days ahead of time).

Healthful Carrots Plentiful

Good eating this season means carrots. Thrifty shoppers will take advantage of the plentiful supplies of this vegetable at their local markets.

In Canada, carrots are sold according to grade. Canada No. 1 carrots are the most generally available. They must be firm, well-shaped clean, free from decay and injury, and must have a minimum length of 3½ inches. At home, store carrots in a plastic bag in the refrigerator. They will keep well for a few weeks. For longer periods of time, store them in a moist place, preferably a basement cool room. Remove green tops before storing as they draw moisture from the roots, causing them to wilt.

One of the "yellow" vegetables mentioned in Canada's Food Guide, carrots are considered a good source of vitamin A — a vitamin that is too frequently in short supply in our meals. Vitamin A is important for normal growth, good vision, healthy skin and resistance to infection. One can obtain more than one's daily requirement of vitamin A from one average-sized carrot, one-half cup grated raw carrot, or one-third cup cooked diced carrot. Very little Vitamin A is lost through cooking.

When using carrots as a vegetable, you can count on getting four good servings from a pound — that is 6 to 9 medium carrots or 4 to 5 large ones. Carrots can be used both raw and cooked in many different ways. Combine shredded raw carrots with chopped apples, raisins and salad dressing. Or add them with tart fruit to a lemon flavored gelatin. Make an unusual salad containing shredded carrots, shredded cabbage, peanuts and mayonnaise. For a lunchtime idea, try a carrot and peanut butter sandwich. Grate raw carrots finely to make ½ cup and stir into one cup crunchy-style peanut butter. Spread — on enriched white or whole wheat bread and serve between-meal snack. Eat them plain on a hors d'oeuvre tray or with cheese dips.

Cooked carrots are delicious simply served with butter, salt and pepper but you can dress them up by sprinkling with chopped parsley or dried mint, or nutmeg. Honey-glazed carrots are a traditional vegetable dish with any elegant dinner. Scalloped, creamed, buttered or au gratin, carrots adapt beautifully to any treatment.

For a different yet economical winter vegetable dish, try "Scalloped Carrots and Apples" from Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada. It is the ideal accompaniment for a pork or beef roast or for any poultry dish.

SCALLOPED CARROTS AND APPLES

3 cups sliced carrot.
2 cups sliced peeled apple.
2 tablespoons brown sugar.
½ teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon pepper.
¼ cup butter.
2 tablespoons buttered soft bread crumbs.

Arrange 1½ cups carrot in baking dish. Cover with 1 cup apple. Sprinkle with half the sugar and seasonings. Dot with half the butter. Repeat layers. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F until almost tender (40 to 50 minutes). Uncover, sprinkle with crumbs and continue baking until crumbs are lightly browned (about 10 minutes more), 6 servings.

NOTE: Leftover cooked carrots may be used in this recipe but baking time should be reduced to 25 to 30 minutes.

Sailor to Writer Then Master Chef

NEW YORK (NYT) — Julia Child has eaten and admired Alfredo's cooking. James Beard who, early on, had a stage career, is frequently with Alfredo and his wife, Jane White, the actress, discussing theatre and dining on the likes of carpaccio alla veneto and macaroni shells with fresh sardine sauce. When Gale Greene entertained Paul Boue and three other of the finest and best known chefs of France, she selected one of Alfredo's restaurants — and Alfredo did the cooking.

Alfredo Viazzi, a native of Savona, Italy, owns two of the most successful restaurants in New York, the Trattoria da Alfredo at 90 Bank Street, and the Caffè da Alfredo at 17 Perry Street.

He came recently to our kitchen in East Hampton, N.Y., and demonstrated that he is not only a very fine cook but an engaging and enthusiastic food talker as well. He told us that his liking and respect for food came about from two sources — his mother, who was a dreadful cook; and a humorist named Pittigrilli, who wrote for Italian newspapers in the 1930s.

Alfredo shifted his attention to a kitchen containing artichokes alla Romana, and added that his mother, thanks to his father, had a fantastic influence on his palate.

"My mother was — unashamedly — a choking, abominable cook and yet she was always trying her hand at something in the kitchen," he said. "My father would come home each night and look at the table and say, 'let's go out,' then he'd march us off to a marvelous old Tuscan trattoria on the waterfront in Savona."

Although Alfredo, 53 years old and the father of two married daughters by his first wife, is markedly and deservedly successful as a chef and restaurant owner, he came by his present métier late in life.

He came to America in 1946 and had an interesting if desultory series of experiences, few of which had anything to do with food in a professional sense.

He was a merchant seaman for seven years, wrote soap operas for Italian radio and published best-selling paperback novel titled "The Cruel Dawn." Eventually he managed a political club in Manhattan and in 1957 opened the restaurant Portofino, which is still in existence but which he sold in 1963 when he returned to Italy.

Two more things, vitally important in his life, happened at the Portofino. He learned to cook from a "fantastic" Italian chef named Gino Ratti, who returned to Italy 15 years ago.

At the Portofino, there was a small stage and there Alfredo staged plays on Monday evenings when the restaurant closed. A young actress named Jane White appeared in one of those plays and after a brief courtship they were married.

Here are some of Viazzi's specialties:

CARPACCIO ALLA VENETO
(A raw meat and mayonnaise appetizer)

1 pound boneless shell steak, trimmed of all fat and cut into six equal slices.

1 cup mustard and tarragon mayonnaise, approximately (see recipe).

1. Using a flat mallet, pound each steak slice until it is quite thin, about one-eighth inch thick. Arrange the slices slightly overlapping on a large cold platter.

2. Serve the cold, raw meat with mustard and tarragon mayonnaise on the side, letting each guest serve himself.

Traditionally, the steak is served without seasoning and with the mayonnaise which also contains no salt. For those who wish it, salt may be served separately.

Yield: Six servings.

SALSA MAIONESE
(Mustard and tarragon mayonnaise)

3 egg yolks

1-teaspoon Dijon or Dussel-

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

dorf mustard
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
Juice of one lemon
1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon or 1 teaspoon dried
1/2 cup olive oil

1. Combine the yolks, mustard, white pepper and about one-teaspoon of lemon juice in a mixing bowl. Add the tarragon. Beat with a wire whisk.

2. Continue to beat vigorously while gradually adding the oil. Beat in the remaining lemon juice. This should be a very thin mayonnaise and for carpaccio it is best left unsalted.

Yield: About one cup.

MOZZARELLA FRESCA CON POMODORA E ACCIUGHE
(Fresh Mozzarella cheese with tomatoes and anchovies)

1/2 to 1 pound fresh Mozzarella cheese
12 slices red, ripe tomatoes
36 flat anchovy fillets
6 teaspoons dried oregano, more or less to taste
4 to 6 tablespoons olive oil
Freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Cut the Mozzarella into 12 more or less equal slices and arrange them on a serving dish. Place one slice of tomato atop each. Garnish each serving with three flat anchovy fillets.

2. Sprinkle each serving with equal amounts of oregano and olive oil. Add a few turns of the peppermill and serve at room temperature.

Yield: Six to 12 servings.

SCALOPPINE BESTIVOGLIO
Veal scallops with prosciutto and Marsala

20 Dried Italian mushrooms, available in Italian markets

1/2 pound thinly sliced prosciutto or ham

12 thin slices veal, preferably from the leg, about one pound

2 tablespoons olive oil

14 tablespoons butter

2 teaspoons freshly chopped tarragon or 1 teaspoon dried

1/2 cup finely chopped parsley

1/2 cup Marsala wine

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Place the mushrooms in a bowl and add hot water to cover. Let stand to soften. Drain and squeeze to extract excess moisture. Slice the mushrooms and set aside.

2. Stack the prosciutto slices and cut them into quarter-inch cubes. Set aside.

3. Pound the veal slices with a flat mallet to make them thinner.

4. Heat one tablespoon oil in each of two frying pans. When the oil is very hot without smoking, add the scallopine in one layer. Cook over high heat about 30 seconds and turn. Cook about one minute.

5. Add the butter to another large skillet and when it is hot, transfer the scallopine to the butter. Scatter the prosciutto over all. Add the tarragon and parsley. Add the mushrooms.

6. Cook over high heat about 30 seconds and add the Marsala. Cook over high heat about four minutes, adding salt and pepper to taste. When ready, the sauce should be buttery and clear. Transfer the veal pieces to six hot plates and spoon the sauce over.

Yield: Six servings.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old divorcee who is engaged to marry a 29-year-old man I'll call "Ira."

I have two children who are being raised by my mother because I work and can't keep them, but I intend to quit work and take the children after I'm married.

My problem is Ira's parents. We announced our engagement over the holidays and are planning a spring wedding.

Ira's parents are very wealthy. He is an only son and they are of another religion. When we announced our engagement, they tried to appear happy, but they couldn't hide their disappointment.

A few days ago I got a call (at work) from the attorney who represents Ira's father. He said he wanted to see me. We met and, to make a long story short, Ira's father has offered me a large sum of money if I will break the engagement. It's enough to take care of me for a long time, and surely until I find another man.

Ira is in his father's business and they are an affectionate and closely knit family, so if I married him I would never feel "accepted." I care for him a lot, but to be honest, the money is tempting. I'm attracted enough to get another man soon. In fact, I know two right now who would marry me tomorrow, but the security isn't quite as good with one, and the other is 52.

What should I do? — On The Fence

DEAR ON: Since you're on the fence, I think you should get off on the side with the money. If you really cared for Ira, you'd have been insulted and outraged by such a proposition. But since you're considering it, and asking me what you should do, I say ... take it!

Tempting Offer From Intended's Dad

DEAR ABBY: Dad got Mom a portable TV for Christmas so she could watch it in the kitchen. Now it's always on the table when we have supper. We get the news mostly, but that's not the problem. The problem is that nobody can say a word at the table anymore because the TV is on, and Dad wants to hear it.

We used to talk about other things, and bring up family matters at the table because that's really the only time the whole family gets together. No more.

I am only 12 and I don't run this house, but I sure wish I could tell my folks to take the TV off the supper table without getting creamed. — Number One Son

DEAR SON: You sound like a bright and reasonable young man. Why don't you just tell 'em like you told me? I think you have a good case.

DEAR ABBY: My mother came to visit my husband and me for two weeks. We live in a small apartment with only a double bed in the bedroom and a sofa in the living room.

My husband is 6 ft. 5" and weighs 260, and he couldn't sleep on the sofa. My mother is 72, and has a bad back, so she couldn't sleep on the sofa either.

We didn't want to go to the expense of renting a bed, and we didn't know anyone who could lend us one; so I slept on the sofa and my husband and my mother slept in the double bed. (My mother slept in all her clothes plus my husband's raincoat.)

We have had nothing but criticism from the relatives since this story got around. Do you see anything wrong with this setup? — New Yorker

DEAR N.Y.'er: No. What was their beef?

Force Disguised?

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The Viet Cong has accused the United States of sending 26,000 servicemen dressed as civilians to South Vietnam since the 1973 Paris ceasefire, the North Vietnam news agency reports. The agency, quoting a foreign ministry statement from the Provisional Revolutionary Government, which the Viet Cong backs, says hundreds of U.S. airmen disguised as civilians entered South Vietnam this year, making the total 26,000.

Noose Backers Demand Action

CALGARY (CP) — The "Voice of Canadians," a group favoring wider use of capital punishment, Monday demanded that members of Parliament who oppose the death penalty be impeached from office.

The group also said Solicitor-General Warren Allmand should be removed from office, that MPs who do not represent voter sentiment on hanging be jailed, and that the judicial system be changed.

Social Credit MLA Albert Ludwig, who supports the death penalty, was forced to defend himself and the Canadian justice system from attacks by the small but vocal audience.

Ludwig had been invited to address the group, but spent much of the evening on the defensive. He reminded the group several times that he, like them, supports capital punishment.

Ludwig said he sent letters to all 265 Members of Parliament asking their positions on capital punishment.

He said "19 out of 20 of those who replied favored retention of capital punishment," but he admitted under questioning that only 65 MPs answered his letter.

Similar letters were sent to the other 74 Alberta MLAs but only two answers were received, he said.

The group demanded that MPs who do not support hanging be "thrown out" and one man said MPs who go against voter support for hanging should be imprisoned for taking money under false pretenses.

Ludwig said MPs and cabinet ministers can be removed from office during elections, but members of the audience shouted back that they should have the power to remove politicians between elections if they go against the will of the people.

Sadistic Vandals Rampage

EDMONTON (CP) — Extensive damage was done to a city junior high school during the weekend by vandals who broke in a side door, destroyed school equipment and killed animals in a science lab.

Police said the vandals pulled telephones from walls in Rosslyn Junior High School, smashed windows, office machinery, a refrigerator and a slide projector, and overturned bookcases in the library.

In the school's science lab, a large turtle was killed when a bar was driven through its back. Gerbils were set free in the room, and fish in the aquarium poisoned by the vandals who poured glue into the water.

No estimate of damages was immediately available by school officials, who said the destruction was the work of "some sadistic person."

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Rod Sykes today asked Attorney General Merv Leitch to authorize a judicial inquiry into the affairs of the convention centre.

He said in a prepared statement that the inquiry should look into the conduct of city employees and members of council. The role of the news media in the controversy should also be investigated, he said.

The mayor's call for a judicial inquiry following an investigation launched last week by city police into the hugging of a convention centre authority meeting Jan. 20.

Convention centre manager Doug Goadby was fired 10 days after the meeting and on the same day when he called for the mayor's resignation from the authority.

EDMONTON (CP) — Five members of the first graduating class of women Mounties will be posted at detachments near Edmonton, the RCMP has announced.

The women, graduating March 3, will be stationed at Sherwood Park, Fort Saskatchewan; Ponoka, Stony Plain and Fort McMurray.

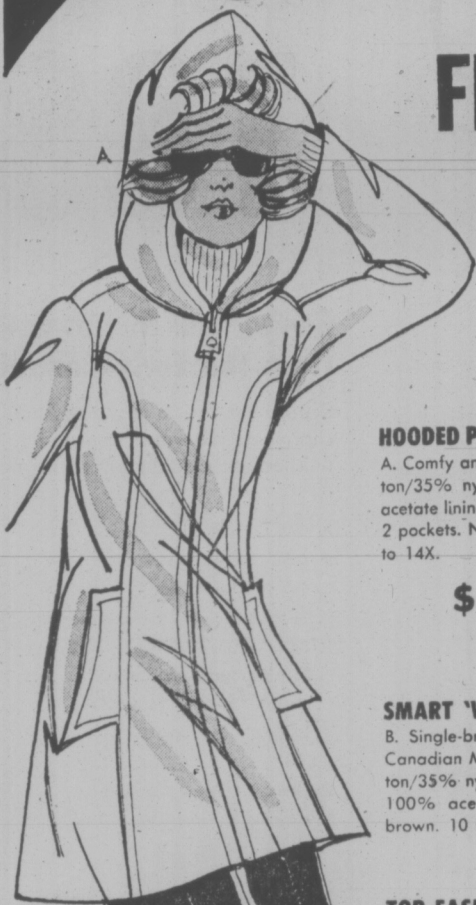

Sgt. Doug Watt said in an interview the women would be "doing everything the regular policemen are involved in now" and would receive the same pay as their male counterparts.

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Van Christou, 49, a Lethbridge orthodontist, has been named chancellor of the University of Lethbridge. It was announced today. He will take over from Dr. James Oshtro at the March 15 meeting of the senate.

Socred Seeks Comox Riding

COURTENAY — Dan Campbell, former municipal affairs minister in the Social Credit government, announced Tuesday he will seek his party's nomination for Comox riding in the next provincial election.

The nominating convention will be held May 3 at Campbell River community hall. Only one other person so far, Kevin Storie, has said he will seek the nomination.

Campbell was defeated by Karen Sanford of the New Democratic Party in the 1972 election which brought the NDP to power.

A former school teacher before entering politics, he has been serving as administrative assistant to Socred leader Bill Bennett since 1973.

SCHOOL BUDGET AT $3M

QUALICUM BEACH — Provisional operating budget for this district's school board has been set at $3,034,072.

It will be reviewed in the next few weeks and should be ratified by April.

Instruction, which includes teachers' salaries, is the largest budget item at $2,052,250.

A contract with the Nanaimo Regional Transit system for school busing will cost an estimated $200,000 this year, year's budget by $879,683.

Qualicum's share in support of Malaspina College in Nanaimo will be set by the department of education later.

The provisional budget total for this year exceeds last year's budget by $879,683.

Comox Base Picketed

COURTENAY — A strike by 80 members of the General Labor and Trades Employees Union at Canadian Forces Base Comox has hampered construction projects and the supply system, a union spokesman said.

"About 95 per cent of the people supplying services have honored our picket line," said George Field, local co-ordinator of the Public Service Alliance.

The GLT is a member union of the Alliance, which is bargaining with the federal treasury board for parity in wages with workers doing the same work in the private sector.

The picket line has affected construction of a new fire hall and completion of a runway lighting contract. About a dozen GLT members have been "designated" to maintain the base's emergency services.

10 Years For MDA

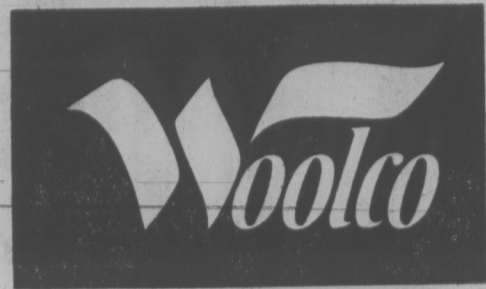

NANAIMO — Dale Stewart Elliott of Duncan has been sentenced to 10 years in prison after being found guilty earlier of trafficking in the chemical drug MDA.

Elliott had originally been charged along with Arthur Williams of Ladysmith last year after a police investigation which lasted more than a year.

Court was told during the trial that the two men worked together to manufacture the drug in a laboratory at Ladysmith. The two-month trial ended in December and sentence has been passed by Judge Leslie Cashman in county court.

$250 Drug Fine

Eighteen-year-old Ted Wachtin, of Shawnigan Lake, was fined $250 in county court Tuesday for possession of a restricted drug, MDA. He had pleaded guilty earlier.

Public Servant's Success Story

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — From internment camp to the second most powerful job in the Canadian public service!

It's quite a success story. It's the story of Tommy K. Shoyama, 59-year-old Japanese Canadian, who has been appointed deputy minister of finance. He was one of four eminently qualified men in the running for that influential post.

That internment camp was not a German or Japanese camp. It was a Canadian camp. A shameful chapter in the Canadian history of the Second World War when the government at Ottawa panicked over cries of alarm from B.C.

Fearful over the threat to the Pacific shores posed by the expanding Japanese Empire the Canadian government issued instructions that Japanese Canadians were to be moved out of their homes and off their farms into the interior. Tommy Shoyama was one of those uprooted and forced to move to a detention camp. The official government biography issued with his new appointment glosses over that period.

It says without explanation that from 1939 to 1945 he was editor and publisher of the semi-weekly newspaper "The New Canadian" published in Vancouver and Kaslo, B.C. Kaslo was the site of the detention camp. Today Tommy Shoyama doesn't like to talk about that period. The tensions of war and the fears of invasion made Canadians and others take actions that after three decades of peace seem unbelievable.

It's a story that Finance Minister John Turner likes to tell as an illustration of the exceptional qualities of his new deputy.

The appointment has been universally welcomed in the finance department. "He's back and we're glad of it," said one official. Another recalled how when the retiring deputy minister Simon Reisman summoned key advisors in the department to sit down around the table for a bull session in advance of the preparation of the last budget, he asked: "Are we all here?"

"No," came the response. "Who's missing," asked Simon.

"Tommy," came the reply and the deputy had to ruefully agree that the tough minded, pragmatic Tommy Shoyama was indeed sorely missed. He had been promoted to the post of deputy minister of energy mines and resources.

A quiet, soft spoken determined man who has built a solid reputation in federal government circles for his sound advice and good decisions Tommy Shoyama came from a working class environment. A graduate of the University of British Columbia like his minister, he served a year in Canadian Army Intelligence after the war.

He then embarked on a career in government joining the Saskatchewan CCF administration headed by T.C. Douglas. It was the first socialist government in North America and as such was regarded as an exciting opportunity for young eager would-be government economists. Today Tommy Douglas has an affectionate regard for the diminutive Japanese-Canadian. Several civil servants reared in government service under Tommy Douglas left the province to take jobs in Ottawa when the late Ross Thatcher was elected Liberal premier supplanting the New Democratic Party government. They are fondly labelled the "Saskatchewan Mafia" by federal Liberals and led Thatcher to believe the Ottawa grits had gone too far "left."

"Tommy" as he is fondly known in finance, has come a long way since making his move to the big league. First he was a senior economist with the Economic Council. Three years later in 1967 he transferred to the federal finance department as director of the fiscal policy division. One year later he was appointed assistant deputy minister of federal-provincial relations in the department. In 1973 he headed the inter-departmental task force for the Western Economic Opportunities Conference — a tough assignment.

When energy problems became all consuming in 1974 he was named deputy minister of the department of energy, mines, and resources. The finance boys were sorry to lose him and are happy to get him back. After all, they say, energy is important but more important is the job of deputy finance minister. And he was the best available man for the job when Simon Reisman announced his decision to retire to private life. He will be second only to Michael Pitfield in that $60,000 a year top bracket of the public service elite. Pitfield a close friend of the prime minister is clerk of the privy council.

Beef War Talks Call

By PAUL WHITEHEAD
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Falling beef prices in Canada have prompted Canadian officials to propose a new meeting with the U.S. aimed at ending the so-called "beef war."

As prices drop, nearing the lower American level, the quotas Ottawa imposed last August to keep cheaper U.S. beef from flooding Canadian markets are no longer necessary.

Indeed, estimates that Canadian prices might plunge below the U.S. level by this summer would make it highly advantageous for Canadian farmers if Ottawa's quotas — and the retaliatory quotas imposed by Washington last November — are removed.

The Canadian proposal for a new meeting to discuss the "beef war" was confirmed Tuesday by officials here and in Ottawa. They pointed out no date for the talks had been set, although it is likely a meeting would take place soon.

However, the officials were guarded in talking about what results a meeting might produce.

Tom Burns, an assistant deputy minister of trade and commerce in Ottawa, confirmed in a telephone interview that Ottawa has proposed another meeting.

He would not reveal what proposals — if any — Canada would like to make.

"I think both governments would like to review the situation," Burns commented.

A U.S. State Department official in Washington said he believed "the Canadians are now anxious to agree on a lifting of the quotas" because of the narrowing of the price differential between U.S. and Canadian markets.

However, he also declined to predict whether a meeting to the trade dispute is at hand.

The desire of the U.S. government for a lifting of the quotas as soon as possible was reiterated Tuesday by Clayton Yeutter, an assistant secretary of agriculture.

"We'd be pleased to see the quotas ended even if the situation may soon reverse, with Canadian producers anxious to sell their cattle in a higher priced American market," Yeutter said in an interview.

"We believe that in the long run, a free market or at least a freer market is the best interests of both countries," noted the assistant secretary.

Canadian cattlemen, who pressured Ottawa to limit the import of lower-priced U.S. beef last summer, are now anxious to see a quick end to the "beef war."

Carlie Gracey, general manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association CCA, said Tuesday that he is anxious the dispute be resolved quickly because he fears "the U.S. may not want to remove their own quotas this summer if their prices are higher."

In a telephone interview Gracey said at his Toronto office that Canadian producers "have an excess of 30,000 feeder cattle that we didn't have at this time last year."

Jail for Trafficking 'Enormous' Pot Stash

A 43-year-old Victorian, Robert Adams Graham, was sentenced to two years less a day in jail Tuesday after being found guilty in county court of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

The charge was laid after police found 65 pounds of marijuana at Graham's former residence, 2-604 Wilson, last May.

Judge Montague Drake said there was "no doubt at all" that Graham had possession of marijuana in his apartment.

In light of the various exhibits in the courtroom, particularly the "enormous" quantity of marijuana, he also found him guilty of trafficking.

Defence counsel Dermot Owen-Flood suggested that Graham could have been "set up." A doctor had testified Graham could have been in a psychotic condition and "in that state the accused would not know what was going on in and around him."

The apartment was a "shambles" and yet the landlord and Graham's sons, Christopher Robert, testified the accused was a tidy person.

Prosecutor Bruce McConnan said the "cold, hard evidence" was that Graham was in possession of 65 pounds of marijuana and there were notes found with such entries as "Doug 32 ounces" and other "paraphernalia" such as a small scales and marijuana butts in a glass. It was "pure speculation" that Graham was set up and not sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt, McConnan referred to the "quantity alone" in arguing Graham was guilty of trafficking.

Before sentence was passed, Owen-Flood said Graham was a man used by others, disabled from working, who had lost everything — wife, family, business.

McConnan said imprisonment was "most appropriate" considering the quantity of the drug found in Graham's apartment.

Graham told the court he hadn't smoked marijuana for over a year, didn't know why the small scales were in his apartment and didn't know how boxes of marijuana were in a closet or how plastic bags of marijuana came to be in his apartment.

"I haven't sold marijuana," he said.

Asked what the reference to "Doug 32 ounces" was in one notebook found in his apartment, Graham said "I don't remember these things. I don't sell marijuana, sir."

Memorial Bursary Awarded

First award from the memorial fund established by family and friends of the late Ray Buckett has been made in the form of a bursary to 16-year-old Victoria composer Rod Sharman.

Sharman is a student of Murray Adaskin and one of his compositions, Concert Etude for piano, recently took first place in a competition for student composers 16 and under, sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Blago Simenov of Toronto.

First performance of the Concert Etude will be given at Craigdarroch Castle on Saturday at 12:15 p.m. by another outstanding student, 15-year-old pianist Walter Prossnitz.

The sponsoring Victoria Conservatory of Music's administrator Dennis Killian, explains that bursary awards from the Ray Buckett and other funds are made to assist deserving students with tuition and other music education expenses.

The funds are open, he says, to anyone wishing to make a donation. All such donations are tax deductible.

FBI Probed Fed 'Leak'

WASHINGTON (AP)

The Federal Reserve Board says Chairman Arthur Burns requested the FBI to investigate Fed employees to determine if any gave Consumer Reports magazine a list of interest rates charged by banks for consumer loans.

A board spokesman made the statement after The Washington Post learned that FBI agents had been interviewing employees of the bank regulatory agency to determine who might have leaked the interest rate list.

The list, which appears in the March issue of the two-million-circulation consumer magazine, shows variations of as much as five percentage points in interest rates charged for auto, personal and consumer loans given by different banks.

Consumer reports obtained the list from sources it refuses to disclose after U.S. District Court here ordered the magazine under the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act.

The list was not given because the court's ruling was stayed pending the outcome of an appeal by the board.

The purpose of the FBI investigation, a FED spokesman said is to determine if a leak occurred and who may be responsible.

"The only thing we know is that some figures involved in the litigation (under the Freedom of Information Act) were published by Consumers Union," he said.

An FBI spokesman said the bureau began an investigation last week at the request of the justice department criminal division.

Its purpose is to determine if there were violations of laws prohibiting theft of government property or disclosure of confidential government information in connection with the magazine article, he said.

Two Congressional subcommittees Tuesday, meanwhile, announced that they will investigate the board's response to the apparent leak.

Rep. Wright Patman, chairman of the domestic monetary policy subcommittee of the House banking committee, asked Burns in a letter to supply him with answers to seven questions, including the amount of money spent by the FED to oppose the Freedom of Information act suit brought by Consumer Reports.

In a letter to Rep. Henry Reuss, chairman of the full banking committee, Patman said: "It appears to me that the type of information published by Consumer Reports should be available to the public, and I question the right of the Federal Reserve to suppress it or to attempt to harass employees who have been willing to make such data available."

Patman added, "this incident is in keeping with the Federal Reserve's long record of secrecy, and it is a clear indication that the agency feels its responsibility is to protect the banks and the banks' data rather than providing information to consumers."

Giant PR Machine Buffs Gov't Image

The federal government is plunging ever deeper into the high-rolling world of public relations, with a bankroll said to exceed $200 million annually backing an information bureaucracy of 863 persons at last count. That represents growth of more than 100 per cent in five years.

The ranks of the functionaries continue to swell — there are 403 vacancies as well — and the hardware assembled for helping spread the message includes fully-equipped TV studios.

It is an entrenched information and propaganda machine of imposing proportions that seeks to buff the federal image to a high gloss by publishing, broadcasting, and sometimes suppressing facts and opinions about the government and those who run it.

Critics, including some who work within the machine, have been asking if bigger really means better. They say only a handful of departments and agencies, such as the agriculture department with its appeal to a specific audience, are doing a justifiable public relations job.

The people in charge say they do not know how much it all costs, though a Senate investigation last spring said $200 million was a good guess.

These services cover the media from cold to hot; from the written to the spoken word.

About 50 of the federal agencies and departments have joined the glossy world of television in what some officials involved say was a costly and uncoordinated spending spree of several millions of dollars.

The federal collection of TV electronic hardware ranges from simple video scanners of the kind used to watch for shoplifters in retail stores to fully equipped TV studios.

Bigger spenders such as the health and trade departments possess elaborate systems that one information officer said "anybody would be proud to own."

Sony of Canada Ltd., subsidiary of the big Japanese electronics firm, finds federal business good enough to have a representative spending virtually all his time looking after sales to the government.

For example, the health department was said to have invested at least $50,000 in picture- and sound-recording equipment to outfit a television studio at its headquarters suburb of government buildings here.

The department rented additional equipment and produced a series of six taped television shows on sports, fitness, food inspection and other topics.

Then the romance with television ended. "We decided to abandon it because the cost was too high," said Pierre Couture, the department's information director.

Most departments with television equipment said they use it mainly for staff training. One of the biggest users in this area is the Public Service Commission, the federal hiring agency, which has 25 black-and-white cameras and monitors in its language-training school at a capital cost of about $60,000.

Another is manpower and immigration whose information director, Mary Erb, uses "a modest capacity" to make videotapes of speeches and conferences. Erb wants to expand and said his department is shopping for about $45,000.

Grant Carman and information worth of new color equipment.

The agriculture department has both radio and film studios at the Central Experimental Farm where daily consumer and farmer-oriented radio broadcasts and about 10 films a year are produced.

Despite the expensive tags, the opinion makers are not all happy.

Last fall, two Parliamentary Press Gallery reporters were hired by the government for $1,000 each to interrogate senior civil servants about the role of Ottawa's information and public relations machine.

The two, Robert McKeown of Weekend Magazine and Jean-Marie Poliquin of Radio-Canada, says they found no consensus on what the multi-million dollar information bureaucracy is all about.

The reporters conducted a videotaped television interview with five deputy ministers on the role and performance of the 863 information officers who function in almost every one of the government's 91 departments and agencies.

They said the deputies couldn't agree on how the information machine should work, what qualities information officers should possess or how close information directors should be to the centres of power of their departments.

The 50-minute color program was produced in one of the government's many television studios here for showing to about 45 senior information officers.

For their money, the two gallery members were required to spend several days preparing for the interview.

UVic Band Concert Friday

A mid-winter concert by the University of Victoria Concert Band will be conducted by Jesse Read on Friday at 8 p.m. in the MacLaurin Building auditorium.

Read who is a member of the Department of Music faculty is principal bassoon with Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

The program will include the William Bird Suite by Gordon Jacobs, Partita by Franz Krommer, Sinfonia by Donizetti and 20th century works by Alan Hovhaness, Paul Zorn, Barney Childs and Charles Ives. From the last-named composer's works, the Variations on "America" has been chosen.

Plans for the band for the balance of the season include an outdoor spring concert March 28 and participation in the Vancouver Island Band Festival in Nanaimo on March 21.

There is no admission charge for Friday's concert.

Alta. Jail Sit-In Ends

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta. (CP) — A sit-in by 90 prisoners at the Fort Saskatchewan Jail, 20 miles north-east of Edmonton, ended Tuesday night after demonstrators were allowed to voice their complaints to a reporter.

The protest, a 24-hour sit-in and hunger strike by prisoners in block A, was sparked by what one demonstrator termed "appalling" conditions at the jail.

information programs and some measure of how well or poorly information programs are getting the government's many messages to the people.

Senior civil servants seem to have widely divergent views on how and how well their information systems should function.

One deputy minister said information directors should be admitted to important internal policy conferences and encouraged to promote their own ideas.

Another said information officers bring only trivia to these meetings and should be excluded.

Really good career bureaucrats — officers — emerge from many branches of government but seldom from the information machine, he said.

One deputy has spoken of the standard procedure in his department whenever reporters uncover "a boo-hoo or a catastrophe."

"My information director is on the phone and says 'What's the party line on this? What can I say?'"

"Sometimes I tell her to say nothing and she tells me we can't do that."

The deputy said most information officers are "very conscious of the need to be as forthcoming as possible" when asked about sensitive matters.

The fact that they are frequently inhibited from doing so has created a morale problem, some present and former information officers said.

They said many officers quit offering new ideas or taking initiatives of their own and concentrate on surviving within the bureaucracy.

One who now is a press gallery reporter quit his information job last September.

"When I started work in August, 1973, I was handed a pile of statutes — legislation — that the department administers and told to become familiar with its activities."

After two days, I had been through the statutes, talked to everyone in the branch and reported that I was ready to take on a job.

"Not for three weeks was I given an assignment. Then it was a five-paragraph press release which I was given five days to do."

"The boredom, the forced inactivity, is what I remember best."

"One man with about 25 years' service wants to retire but cannot do so at full pension because his under 55. He fairly frequently arrives at the office at 4:45 p.m., remaining until 5 p.m., and is never there more than a few hours a day."

Senior mandarins kept a wary eye on real and imagined threats from other departments, measuring their prestige and progress against the traditional benchmarks of "money, manpower and material."

The view is that inter-departmental co-operation might improve efficiency and reduce costs, which in turn might mean lower budgets and diminished power in the civil service pecking order.

"The unwritten rule has always been that you fight any attempt to undermine your authority or erode your budget," one senior information officer said.

The film was Information Canada's first attempt to change all that. Infocan, itself the target of a freeze-out by members of the information establishment in other departments, wants to build what one official calls "horizontal links" among information services.

The aim is to have a bigger exchange of ideas on how information systems should work, more co-ordination of

"It wasn't unusual to form a group — I was often one of them — at 10:30 a.m. and head for the tavern at coffee break, returning whenever you felt like it or not at all."

Last summer, I went on three office swimming parties. We'd get up a group around 11 a.m. and take off for the day. It happens all the time and no one complains. People just disappear for the whole day, without salary loss, of course.

"No one seems to care."

But there are still many who turn to the public service for the money alone.

One Parliamentary Press Gallery reporter, less than five years in journalism, recently quit his $300-a-week job to take up a government public relations post paying $500.

The bulk of the government's 863 information officers — there are another 403 vacancies — earn between $313 and $425 a week to perform the basic writing, editing and audio-visual tasks that keep the information machine running.

By comparison, the top basic rate for a newspaper reporter in any Canadian union contract is $322 a week.

The organized information officers were the first group within the government to win a cost-of-living pay raise. Their incomes rose by 12.4 per cent Jan. 1 to keep abreast of the 1974 increase in the consumer price index. Together with earlier increases, their pay has risen 27.4 per cent in 27 months.

Pay scales now range from $190 a week for inexperienced trainees to $625 a week for some of the 65 executives who run the information machine.

The treasury board, the government financial controlling agency, used incomes being earned by reporters and editors nationally as a guide in setting the middle-level pay scales. The relatively good pay is attracting more high-qualified job seekers, "so our quality is bound to go up," one official said.

Prof. W. H. Kesterton of Carleton University school of journalism said there has been a trend toward public relations careers among journalism students since the late 1960s.

A survey of 618 Carleton graduates showed 39 per cent are working in public relations, the majority in government information jobs. Another 28 per cent work for newspapers and 12 per cent in radio and television.

Protection Coming For Gore

Central Saanich council at its next meeting is expected to take action to protect the native flora of 11-acre Gore Park, on Greig Avenue, off Wallace Drive.

Ald. Don MacLaurin said it is one of the few remaining natural areas on the Saanich Peninsula.

"The trouble is that horses are damaging the area," he said. "We haven't got too many places like this left and we should preserve it."

The parkland was bequeathed to the municipality by the Gore family.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler felt deterrence was as necessary as rehabilitation in sentencing Norman Claude Vandal in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

Vandal, 22, of 649 Manchester, had pleaded guilty Jan. 22 to two counts of possession of known stolen property. Police said stolen construction tools worth about $250 were found in Vandal's possession Sept. 28.

Vandal had been convicted of robbery with violence in 1973 and theft in 1971, court was told.

Ostler agreed that these prior convictions "can not be disregarded."

He sentenced Vandal to one month in jail followed by 18 months probation with the order to attend the Community Diversion Centre.

Bail was set at $500 for Burton Justin Tiffin charged with raping a Colwood woman Feb. 2.

Ostler remanded Tiffin, of 660 Rockingham Cove, to March 4 for election and plea.

Gloria Lynn Jones, 31, and Patricia Annabelle Otto, 34, jointly charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, were ordered to stand trial in higher court after defence lawyer George Jones waived a preliminary hearing.

The women, both of 80 Dallas Ltd., were arrested Nov. 13 after a police raid at that address.

Karen Leslie Andrews, 23, of 1182 Colville Road, received a suspended sentence, was placed on six months probation and ordered to take psychiatric treatment and perform 20 hours community work after admitting theft under $200.

She pleaded guilty Feb. 10 to taking a customer's change purse, left on the counter at Merle Norman Cosmetics, 654 Fisgard, on Feb. 6.

Two men charged with impaired driving pleaded guilty and received licence suspensions and $750 in fines.

Eugene Felter, 50, of 640 Cornwall, was fined $400. Police stopped him in the 2600-block Cook Jan. 29.

Albert Edwin Tilley, 54, of 2914 Shakespeare, was fined $350. He had been stopped by police early Tuesday on Belleville.

Nineteen-year-old Rick March Anderson, 2645 Sooke Rd., was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

He was checked by police in Beacon Hill Park Monday.

John Michael Heslop, 23, of 1340 Sussex, was fined $500 after being found guilty of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge stemmed from an incident last July 21 when several persons attacked Colwood RCMP constable Bill Biden at Dunsmuir high school grounds.

Police said Heslop kicked Biden in the ear inflicting a cut that required several stitches.

In addition to the fine, Alder placed the accused on one years probation.

Christopher Marshall, 30, of 653 Dunedin, was sentenced to two months in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Marshall, a second-time offender, was in a two-car collision at the intersection of Burnside and the Trans-Canada Highway on Nov. 5.

TOP DEFENCE FOR MUNRO

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister John Turner both intervened Tuesday in an effort to discourage intense opposition questioning of Labor Minister John Munro.

Allan Lawrence asked if Munro had received any indication whether or not he will be called as a witness in the criminal trial involving the Hamilton Harbors Board.

Before the Labor Minister could answer, Prime Minister Trudeau said Munro was not being asked questions relating to administration of his department.

Speaker James Jerome ruled, however, that the questions did relate to Munro's ministerial capacity.

At this point Turner insisted that if Lawrence was going to ask questions based on newspaper reports then he must put his seat on the line.

Again the Speaker ruled that the question was acceptable.

Munro, however, did not answer anyway.

$ Hits Record Lows

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar slid to record lows in some European centres today amid continued uncertainty over the future role of the American currency in world oil trade.

The dollar closed at all-time lows in Brussels, Oslo and Zurich and was fixed in Frankfurt one pfennig above its record low in relation to the West German mark.

Meanwhile in Vienna the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) hinted Tuesday night that the declining value of the U.S. dollar might cause it to change its present system of calculating oil prices in a way that would mean higher costs for consumers.

This hint was given by Jamshid Amouzegar, Iran's interior minister and chief delegate to OPEC, following a meeting here of oil ministers from the countries that jointly produce 85 per cent of the world's export petroleum.

In one of the cryptic and seemingly contradictory statements that are characteristic of the way in which OPEC does business, Amouzegar first said that the price set for crude oil in December — one that now has a barrel of crude selling at slightly less than $11 — would remain fixed through the first nine months of this year.

Then, in the next breath, Amouzegar attached a big "if" to that statement by saying: "Now a new subject has come up, and that is, the sharp decline in the dollar. This is an entirely new subject, and we're going to have to discuss it."

Bank of B.C. Revenue Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of B.C. has reported balance of revenue after tax of $232,835 for the three months ended Jan. 31, up 70 per cent from $147,572 in the first quarter of fiscal 1974.

Total revenue for the quarter was $12.9 million compared with $8.3 million last year.

The bank recently issued 255,277 shares under a rights offering, increasing the number of outstanding shares to 765,332.

Some 150 CUPE pickets delayed Memorial Arena hockey action for 18 minutes Tuesday night but there were no major incidents outside the arena as the pickets milled among a crowd of 3,423 people who turned out to the game.

The demonstration delayed the face-off but was generally peaceful, with one or two minor scuffles outside the box office. As well, arena manager John Bate reported some vandalism on gate locks at the back parking lot.

A picket who reportedly tried to block one youngster's path into Memorial Arena was shoved hard by the parents of another boy going into the rink.

The incident ended as quickly as it started.

Bate said someone jammed parking lot gate locks with a substance "like tar," but with the aid of graphite and some "jiggling" as a chain was backsawed, all locks were opened and patrons' cars freed.

Pickets distributed leaflets and their slow-moving line created confusion for persons attempting to line up for tickets.

At least one elderly gentleman paused for a few moments then turned and slowly walked away from the front doors.

The crowd for Victoria's 29th home game was the largest mid-week turnout of the season. The previous high was 3,110 for a Dec. 3 game against New Westminster.

Pickets generally were good-natured in their remarks, which included: "You're not going in there, are you?"

It appeared many union members did cross the picket lines. When a picket recognised someone ("Hey, he's with Hydro..."), a portion of the line began to hoot.

When it became obvious that many fans would not get into the rink by 8 p.m. game time, Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell asked referee Al Paradise to delay the start.

Most of the pickets had disappeared by the end of the first period.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, chairman of the city's personnel and labor relations committee, said today the pamphlets handed out by CUPE picketers to people attending the hockey game contained a number of inaccuracies and untrue statements.

Anderson said the leaflet text claimed that the city's lock-out action had "deprived thousands of our children" of full use of the Memorial Arena for junior hockey and skating, whereas the reason for curtailment of most activities was that ice-making staff who were members of the operating engineers' union would not cross CUPE picket lines.

PSAC Strikes Expanding

GEIGER COUNTER is used by Ontario health ministry official conducting radiation check on Ottawa office building.

Radiation Check Planned

A provincial inspector will arrive in Victoria later today or Thursday morning to check out a local building for any lingering radiation hazard from work formerly done there with luminous paint.

Dr. Allan Arnell, regional health officer, declined today to reveal which building is involved but said "it appears unlikely there is any cause for concern."

He said the building is not now being used for work with luminous paint. The radiation threat appears to be where such paint was manufactured, and sometimes spilled, he said, and that was not the work done at the local location.

The Victoria site is one of four buildings in British Columbia being checked for possible radiation, an official of the provincial occupational health branch said from Vancouver today.

John H. Smith refused to identify the buildings but said two are in Vancouver, one is in Victoria and the fourth is in the Okanagan community of Armstrong. A number of buildings are also being checked in Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

The hazard from luminous paint comes where it contains radium which gives off radiation known to cause cancer.

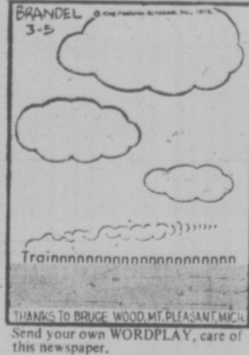

The radiation inspections were ordered after radiation levels up to 800 times safety limits were found on the third floor of a Toronto building.

Some Victoria businessmen are supplying "loans" to young heroin addicts to purchase drugs in Vancouver, a Victoria woman charged Tuesday.

Carol Haley, president of the Victoria Drug-Concerned Society told a Senate committee in Ottawa the businessmen were using "heavies" to collect their loans and were getting away free because there is nothing illegal in lending money.

"The real criminals are the men who put up the money," she said.

A Victoria police spokesman said today though police have no knowledge of the loan-sharking operation alluded to in Haley's remarks, it could be going on.

"Perhaps she has some information we don't have," Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart said.

Haley, of 1817 Newton, was testifying before a committee studying a bill that would lighten penalties for marijuana use.

She said addicts were unanimously opposed to legalizing marijuana and hashish saying they all started with using "soft" drugs.

The mother of five said her oldest son, age 21, was a heroin addict and had started taking drugs at 14, progressing from glue-sniffing to marijuana.

Hempsall Resigns

Leslie Hempsall, associate deputy minister of economic development, has resigned from the provincial government.

"In an interview today, Hempsall said he resigned last week in order to go into the consulting business on his own.

Hempsall, 54, was appointed deputy minister of the department in January 1972 under the Social Credit government but was designated associate deputy last year.

Asked if his resignation had anything to do with the "lateral shift," Hempsall said: "Well, it was a downward shift but it had nothing to do with this."

"I was in industry before and now I've had three and a half years in government so now I have enough experience on both sides to go it on my own. I got what I wanted out of it," he said.

Dief Cancels Talks

OTTAWA — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's speaking engagements for the next two months have been cancelled, including an address to the Canadian Club in Germany. Cancellation was made on the advice of his attending physicians.

Mint Talks Resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Royal Canadian Mint and union negotiators were talking again Tuesday but spokesmen on both sides feel the strike, now in its seventh week, may not be over until the end of a dispute involving a larger group of federal employees.

Record Days Lost

OTTAWA (CP) — The labor force lost more than nine million man days because of work stoppages in 1974, the labor department said today. A record total of 9,255,136 man days were lost in 1,216 work stoppages involving 592,220 employees, the department said in a news release.

Laos Bans Hippies

VIENTIANE (AFP) — Persons classed as hippies will no longer be allowed to enter Laos, the prime minister's office announced here Wednesday.

The spokesman remarked, however, that it was difficult to spot a hippie if he "put on a tie to ask for his visa."

Times News Services

More than 2,000 striking federal workers massed on Parliament Hill this morning as strike action was stepped up across the country to get federal government negotiators back to the bargaining table.

The demonstrating workers were to continue their protests all day, spokesmen said. The workers carried placards while circling in front of the Centre Block and chanting.

Almost all the 2,500 labor and trades workers in the Ottawa area and 500 mint employees were out today as the Public Service Alliance of Canada began to escalate its series of revolving strikes now in their 10th day.

Meanwhile, blue-collar workers of the general labor and trades group, represented by the PSAC, resumed picket lines outside Toronto post office entrances today, ending a 36-hour truce initiated to sort and deliver government social assistance cheques.

In Victoria, crews aboard the Ministry of Transport vessels which dock at the marine services base on Harbour Road could find themselves running low on food if the picket line around the base continues.

The picket line was set up at the base today for the fifth time since the series of rotating strikes started last week.

PSAC members designated as essential to safety and security and ship crew members reported for work this morning before the picket line was set up, but marine services district manager Larry Slaght reported that commercial trucks delivering both food and maintenance supplies have not been crossing the picket line.

Slaght said there are still enough food stores "to last for awhile, but the working stores would be exhausted" during any long-term dispute.

PSAC picket lines also went up today at Dockyard, Naden, Royal Roads, Belmont Park housing subdivision, Rocky Point ammunition magazine and Ogden Point grain elevator.

Members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, employed in ship repair work at Dockyard, had earlier refused to cross the PSAC picket line, but did report for work this morning.

An armed forces spokesman said there was no great concern.

POLICE NAB JOYRIDERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Tuesday they have broken up a juvenile gang which allegedly took about 60 cars for joyrides over a two-month period.

A spokesman said some of the youngsters had been arrested in December for the same crime, but repeated the offence while the juvenile court was processing their cases.

Three-Year Tax Break Extension

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial governments and agencies will get a three-year extension of a tax break they have enjoyed since 1966 if the government's omnibus tax bill passes unchanged.

A finance department spokesman said Tuesday the break would be granted by an amendment that zipped through the Commons unopposed Friday with attendance at its usual end-of-the-week low.

The amendment would extend until Dec. 31, 1978, an exemption from a 15-per-cent withholding tax that Ottawa charged prior to 1966 on interest paid by the provinces for money borrowed outside the country.

The exemption was scheduled to end Dec. 31 this year. Finance Minister John Turner read the amendment, a simple change of date, without explanation Friday afternoon and it was approved routinely. MPs apparently unaware of its significance.

The provision, affecting hundreds of millions of dollars in loans annually, allows the provinces to borrow at cheaper rates. (Other tax bill story, see Page 21.)

Gov't Department For Women Only

A new government branch to deal solely with the participation of women in the economy was announced Tuesday by Economic Development Minister Gary Lauck.

The "women's economic rights branch" has been established to "examine, plan and recommend on all issues affecting the economic rights, economic development and socio-economic status of women in B.C."

Lauck said he was not suggesting the branch was any total answer to the problems of women but it is a "little modest start" to getting women into the business community and the boardrooms of the province.

The projects of the new branch will be a statistical publication on women in B.C.

and "the monitoring of affirmative action on women's participation within the department of economic development."

Through the branch "women will now have a base from which to influence the economic planning and the quality of life in this province," he said.

The branch will be consulted to ensure the viewpoint of women is taken into account in all departmental policies and programs and to ensure the provision of support and advice for women in business. When women try to put the principles of equality into practice their demands are met with "disbelief, resistance and sometimes outright rejection," he said.

"It is now up to all institutions both in the government and the private sector to meet this challenge," said Lauck.

Eileen Caher, a career public servant, will head up the branch, he said, and has already begun her work.

Lauck described Caher as a dedicated and highly qualified civil servant who was working at the lowest level within the department with no opportunity for advancement before the NDP took office. Time after time she was passed up for promotion, he said.

The branch will be staffed by a team of people with backgrounds in economics, statistics, sociology, commerce and related fields and with a history of involvement in the women's movement of B.C.

Premier Barrett has resisted demands by women's groups to form a separate department for women.

Looters by the Hundred Stripped Derailed Freight

THUNDER BAY (CP) — A CNR freight train was looted of flour, fruit and clothing believed to be worth nearly $1 million after it went off the tracks 150 miles east of here two weeks ago, according to the Times-News.

The newspaper says numerous bags of mail and parcel post are also missing, and postmasters in two northern Ontario centres have reported empty mail bags found miles from the derailed train.

The newspaper says the goods were carried off over a nine-day period with the estimated participation of nearly 1,000 people. No cause has been determined for the derailment, which occurred early Feb. 9.

The eastbound train left the tracks 17 miles east of Longlac, turning over nine cars of dressed beef, seven cars of dry goods, two mail cars, two cars of fruit and one car containing horses and hogs.

Two express cars and one car carrying two automobiles were also hurled into the bush and snow, and the wreckage — splattered over hundreds of yards — was a twisted nightmare when CNR special agent George Root arrived.

He found cars laid on their sides, meat on the ground, horses and hogs dying in the wreckage. Hundreds of crates of fruit had been scattered and thousands of pieces of mail had been hurled in every direction.

The crash scene is five miles from the nearest road and, as word of the rail wreckage spread, people began to trickle into the site.

Then, said Root, "it spread like wildfire," with as many as 200 people a day making their way through the bush to raid the rail cars almost at will. Many of the looters came by snowmobile.

Root's call for help brought another CNR official and two Ontario Provincial Police officers from Longlac. Later two other OPP officers from the town of Geraldton came in as relief, but the looting went on.

"People were coming from all over creation — Caramat, Longlac, Kapuskasing, Geraldton — I have never seen anything like it," said Root, who guarded the cars for nine days.

"We tried to keep them away from the train for their own safety. We tried to talk them away. We were running up and down the length of the train trying to keep people away."

"They wouldn't listen to us, they just wanted the meat," Gilbert Ferris, CNR trainmaster at Longlac, at one time saw about a hundred people going through the overturned train cars. "It was a terrible situation. We were not able to control it at all. People wouldn't listen."

He said he did not know of anyone being charged with theft or trespassing.

Another railwayman said it would be difficult to bring a charge of theft that might involve most of the people in a town.

"The jury might smile a lot," he said.

Postal Code Use in City Lags

Victorians are lagging well behind other Canadians in using the new postal code, post office spokesman Buz Sawyer said today.

While the national acceptance rate of the code on a daily basis is 42.8 per cent, the acceptance rate in Victoria is only 27 per cent, Sawyer said.

"And those who don't use the code are simply getting slower mail service," he said. Sawyer explained that the first three digits of the six-character code identify the general geographic location of the address — the province, town and section of that town.

The last three digits pinpoint a small section of the city, for example, one side of a city block, an apartment building, an office building or a large business firm.

"This unique postal code was the first major step in our mechanization program," Sawyer said.

Under the program, letter sorting machines will ultimately be installed in the 26 cities across Canada which account for 85 per cent of Canadian mail. In B.C., sorting machines will be installed in Vancouver and Victoria.

Sawyer said a Victoria mail processing plant is in its final planning stage. Target late for completion is October, 1976.

"Mail manually sorted is handled anywhere from six to 20 times, but mail sorted by machines will be handled only about three times."

"It really cuts down on so much time," he said. "But to be machineable, mail must bear the postal code and fit the machine."

The maximum size an envelope can be six inches by 10 inches, the minimum size is 3½ inches by 5½ inches.

Sawyer said the postal code can also be used very effectively for manual sorting.

"Just looking at the code, we can tell what province, what city and what street the letter is being sent."

There is a postal coding unit in Victoria, he said, and anyone wishing to have their mailing list coded can write Room 203-1230 Government Street, Victoria, V8W 2Y8.

Body Shops Dropping Last of Surcharges

Victoria auto body shops are expected this week to remove the last in a series of surcharges for work done under the provincial Autoplan insurance system.

The members of the Victoria branch of the Automotive Retailers' Association voted in late December to remove the minimum $2 per hour surcharge on the basic work rate of $14 per hour.

The body shops accepted an offer at that time by the Insurance Corporation of B.C. to do car repair work at $15.50, ending the surcharge which had been in effect in the Victoria area since Oct. 1, 1974.

But until this week, the body shops have been charging a $2.83 per hour surcharge on what is called "remove and replace" work, for example, taking off a fender, then bolting it back on.

Victoria ARA president Dennis Butner said letters have been sent out today to all area body shops urging them to forego the "remove and replace" surcharge.

Butner said the ICBC does not allow any charges for the bolting work and "we still require this money," he said.

"But we found that this hassle was not accomplishing anything for the membership, the ICBC or the public."

The ARA across the province will be looking for further rate increases from the ICBC in May, the date of new union contracts for automotive repair workers and Butner said the lifting of the surcharges in Victoria is "an effort to clear things up before the May rates."

Preclearance From Victoria?

The Victoria International Airport is one of four Canadian air terminals being considered as customs preclearance points for airline passengers.

Other preclearance offices may be established at Calgary, Edmonton and Halifax.

Preclearance is the system under which a passenger flying from Canada to the United States is able to clear U.S. customs at the point of departure.

Customs service at the two Alberta airports could be in operation within a year.

Major expansion of existing facilities at Vancouver and Winnipeg are under study.

Neither Canadian nor American spokesmen are willing to estimate when the customs service will be established in Victoria and Halifax.

But both sources stress that demands of traffic must be weighed against the cost of stationing crews of inspectors abroad at a time of economic recession and resultant budget limitations.

Airlines must cover the cost of the physical facilities.

Southern Vancouver Island teachers today marched to the Legislative Buildings to protest what they called inadequate funding for education and government failure to keep its promises.

"Education finance is in a mess," said John Hardy of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation office in Vancouver.

While BCTF officials met with Education Minister Eileen Daily to submit their demands, "alarmed" presidents of teacher associations pressure their MLAs for action.

Leo Chaland, president of the North Vancouver association, said his district's school board had acted in good faith, believing government promises for extra funds in order to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio.

But Daily told the teachers the education department is definitely freezing the teacher-pupil ratio.

"We didn't feel it was responsible financing to inject another 2,000 teachers into the province's education system," she said.

But the government's commitment to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio to 17:1 was made in good faith and the program will continue when economic conditions improve, she said.

Chaland said this year's mill rate for education would jump another 13 mills, meaning an extra $100 to $200 to every homeowner.

Chaland said his association was pressuring the government to keep its promise to remove the education tax from property.

Glen Plueckhahn, president of the Nanaimo association, said his area had more pupils per teacher than anywhere else in the province.

In spite of this, Plueckhahn said, to maintain the status quo of education in the Nanaimo area the mill rate will have to be increased 12 mills (about 33 per cent).

Library Budget Approved

Greater Victoria Library Board Tuesday approved a $1,403,897 budget after chopping $150,000 from the provisional figures.

The budget is 10.09 per cent higher than last year but does not include possible salary increases resulting from negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing library employees.

One third of the spending cutbacks were made in the purchase of new books.

This was made possible by the delayed opening of Saanich's Nellie McClung branch, now slated for completion in 1976.

Further budget cuts were made in personnel, furnishings, supplementary programs, and the building and maintenance programs.

The budget now goes to municipal councils for approval.

Up-Island Mayors Steaming At Dayliner Schedule Switch

CP Rail's Dayliner service between Victoria and Courtenay will launch a "somewhat experimental" new schedule April 28 and initial reaction from up-island community spokesmen is hostile.

The Dayliner will depart Victoria daily except Sunday at 3 p.m., arriving at Nanaimo at 7 p.m. leaving at 7:20 and arriving at Courtenay at 9 p.m.

At 9:10 p.m. it will head south again, arriving at Nanaimo at 10:50 p.m. and staying there overnight. It will leave Nanaimo at 8 a.m. arriving at Victoria at 10 a.m.

The Dayliner now leaves Victoria at 8:30 a.m., reaching Courtenay at 12:40 p.m. and starting the return journey at 1 p.m. to reach Victoria at 3 p.m.

Bob Ferguson, information officer for CP Rail, said from Vancouver today the new schedule was to have been announced and advertised closer to the start date but an up-island newspaper heard of the change and contacted CP Rail. There will be public announcement of the changes coming, he said.

The Dayliner service, which is operated by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, a subsidiary of CP Rail, has generated a continuing stream of criticism from communities it serves in recent years.

An application to the Canadian Transportation Commission by the rail company in 1970 to discontinue the service or have its operating losses subsidized produced stormy hearings in Victoria and led to the CTC ordering the service to be improved and denying a subsidy.

CP Rail has another application currently pending before the CTC. It wants the service reviewed once more to see whether it serves a "useful purpose," should be subsidized or discontinued. The company says it's Dayliner losses in 1973 were about $200,000.

The application was filed with the CTC in December but the commission has not yet indicated whether it will hold public hearings again on the question.

Ferguson said today he could not say whether there had been public consultation on the new Dayliner schedule, which he called "somewhat experimental," but he said there has been a consistent public claim the service should be run "the other way," meaning the schedule should be arranged so up-island passengers could have a day in Victoria.

Meanwhile, up-island spokesmen condemned the new timetable.

Courtenay Mayor William Moore said if the subject wasn't so serious, the new schedule would be "hysterically funny."

"Maybe they've become so ridiculous that something will come out of it," he said.

Cumberland Mayor William Moncrief, an outspoken critic of the rail service, said the new schedule is the reverse of what is needed.

He urged experimentation with operating two trains, one northbound and one southbound, crossing near Nanaimo.

Comox Mayor Richard Merrick said "they're giving us a snow job," he said the new timetable makes things worse for Courtenay-Comox residents.

CLINIC, ARENA AND THE MAN HIMSELF 'Nice Gardener' Enjoys Dig

There are some people used to high office (and many used to no office at all) who would be a trifle upset if they were mistaken for the gardener. But not Major-General George Randolph Pearkes.

It has happened to British Columbia's former lieutenant-governor but he just laughs about it, as he does about most things in life.

In fact, that was where I found him—in the garden (where else) of his almost two-acre mini estate on Tattersall Drive when we got together to chat about New Zealand and Australia and 87th birthdays.

Right here in Victoria we have the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and the G. R. Pearkes Arena and we have the man himself, a sort of legend in his own time. He is 87 today.

G. R. was a Member of Parliament for 15 years and was defence minister in the Diefenbaker government from 1957 to 1961 until he accepted the appointment as lieutenant-governor. He retired from Government House in 1968 when he was named "British Columbian of the Year" and had bestowed on him by the then premier W. A. C. Bennett the Order of the Dogwood, the province's highest honor.

By then, of course, he was quite used to awards. Shining out among a host of lesser honors are the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order, the Military Cross and the Companion of the Order of Canada. Quite recently, he was made an honorary member of the RCMP veterans' association — G. R. joined the RCMP in 1912 and was stationed in the Yukon until the outbreak of the First World War. While making yet another award in 1969, Governor-General Roland Michener called Pearkes "the most decorated man I know."

We went inside where his Alberta-born wife Constance Blytha made us coffee and, being as polite as I could, I said I was sorry to take him away from the garden.

"I'm sorry you're taking me away," he said quickly but with a big grin.

George and Blytha Pearkes, who celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in August this year, have just returned from a month's trip Down Under. They visited Fiji, Auckland and Christchurch in N. Z., and Sydney and Canberra in Australia, with several side trips, they loved it. George didn't even find it too tiring either, but felt that a lot of time was wasted, waiting around airports.

"That's enough travel for one year," says G. R. lightly. "I've always wanted to go to South Africa, but I don't suppose I ever will." And then he laughs: "I think I'll settle down now."

Pearkes was born in Watford in north London, England, and curiously his daughter-in-law Joyce (she's married to their son John, a 43-year-old Vancouver lawyer) comes from Watford in Ontario.

The famous Victorian, who thinks soccer is "a fine team game for youngsters" and can be seen regularly at local matches, has no wishes for the rest of his life except "to potter around the garden" and get it looking even better than it does now. And he doesn't particularly want to live to be 100.

"I enjoy life and I'll take it as it comes," he says wisely. "If I live to be 100 then I'll enjoy life till I'm 100." But he says he would like to see his grandsons, 15-year-old Anthony and 13-year-old Timothy, grow up and "get started."

G. R. glances down at pet poodle Binky, who pleads for one of the cookies that went with the coffee, and smiles.

"Once we had a boxer dog called Baron, but I couldn't give him enough exercise. He would run away from Government House and go downtown and terrorize people by stand-

max low

The Pearkes . . . 'enough travel'

Bawlf to Study Exchange Plan

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf was authorized Tuesday by city council to sound out the possibility of a property exchange that would see city-owned land traded for federal holdings in Victoria.

Bawlf recently suggested with enthusiastic support from council and from Greater Victoria Library Board chairman Ald. Shirley Dowell — that the main Post Office building on Government would be a suitable site for a new central library, when the building is vacated under postal service modernization plans. He is planning to visit Ottawa next month to discuss the library proposal with Public Works Minister Charles Drury, and he told council's caucus meeting Tuesday that it might strengthen Victoria's case if the city could offer some of its own land in exchange.

"It's possible some of our residual Blanshard property (from the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal project) might be suitable for this purpose," he said.

Bawlf said the federal authorities are now carrying out a survey of their accommodation needs in this area "over the long haul," and already are finding an acute shortage of centrally-located land suitable for development. "They have under-built so drastically in the past that they are now leasing about half the space they actually use in the city," he said.

"I think it would be appropriate at this time to submit to the public works minister a formal declaration of our interest in the Post Office building as a possible future library site, and to ask for his co-operation."

"We may have some land somewhere in our inventory that could be part of a trade-off."

Ald. Murray Glazier said any discussions with Ottawa on federal development plans in the city should include the soon-to-be-built federal marine services base at Ogden Point, and a study of its impact on the James Bay residential area.

STRIKE SCUTTLES DRAMA FESTIVAL

The 25th annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, which was to have opened Friday with a record list of entries, has been indefinitely postponed because of the strike of maintenance workers in Greater Victoria schools.

Possible re-scheduling of the festival for early May has been discussed but this is tentative as many factors, such as availability of adjudicators and other commitments of students and teachers affect the decision.

TOP DEFENCE FOR MUNRO

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister John Turner both intervened Tuesday in an effort to discourage intense opposition questioning of Labor Minister John Munro.

Allan Lawrence asked if Munro had received any indication whether or not he will be called as a witness in the criminal trial involving the Hamilton Harbors Board.

Before the Labor Minister could answer, Prime Minister Trudeau said Munro was not being asked questions relating to administration of his department.

Speaker James Jerome ruled, however, that the questions did relate to Munro's ministerial capacity.

At this point Turner insisted that if Lawrence was going to ask questions based on newspaper reports then he must put his seat on the line.

Again the Speaker ruled that the question was acceptable.

Munro, however, did not answer anyway.

$ Hits Record Lows

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar slid to record lows in some European centres today amid continued uncertainty over the future role of the American currency in world oil trade.

The dollar closed at all-time lows in Brussels, Oslo and Zurich and was fixed in Frankfurt one penny above its record low in relation to the West German mark.

Meanwhile in Vienna the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) hinted Tuesday night that the declining value of the U.S. dollar might cause it to change its present system of calculating oil prices in a way that would mean higher costs for consumers.

This hint was given by Jamshid Amouzegar, Iran's interior minister and chief delegate to OPEC, following a meeting here of oil ministers from the countries that jointly produce 85 per cent of the world's export petroleum.

In one of the cryptic and seemingly contradictory statements that are characteristic of the way in which OPEC does business, Amouzegar first said that the price set for crude oil in December — one that now has a barrel of crude selling at slightly less than $11 — would remain fixed through the first nine months of this year.

Then, in the next breath, Amouzegar attached a big "if" to that statement by saying: "Now a new subject has come up, and that is the sharp decline in the dollar. This is an entirely new subject, and we're going to have to discuss it."

Bank of B.C. Revenue Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of B.C. has reported balance of revenue after tax of $222,835 for the three months ended Jan. 31, up 70 per cent from $147,572 in the first quarter of fiscal 1974.

Total revenue for the quarter was $13.9 million compared with $8.3 million last year.

The bank recently issued 255,277 shares under a rights offering, increasing the number of outstanding shares to 765,832.

PSAC Strikes Expanding

GEIGER COUNTER is used by Ontario health ministry official conducting radiation check on Ottawa office building.

Radiation Check Planned

A provincial inspector will arrive in Victoria later today or Thursday morning to check out a local building for any lingering radiation hazard from work formerly done there with luminous paint.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, declined today to reveal which building is involved but said "it appears unlikely there is any cause for concern."

He said the building is not now being used for work with luminous paint. The radiation threat appears to be where such paint was manufactured, and sometimes spilled, he said, and that was not the work done locally.

The Victoria site is one of four buildings in British Columbia being checked for possible radiation, an official of the provincial occupational health branch said from Vancouver today.

John H. Smith refused to identify the buildings but said two are in Vancouver, one is in Victoria and the fourth is in the Okanagan community of Armstrong. A number of buildings are also being checked in Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

The hazard from luminous paint comes where it contains radium which gives off radiation known to cause cancer.

The radiation inspections were ordered after radiation levels up to 800 times safety limits were found on the third floor of a Toronto building.

More than 2,000 striking federal workers massed on Parliament Hill this morning as strike action was stepped up across the country to get federal government negotiators back to the bargaining table.

The demonstrating workers were to continue their protests all day, spokesmen said. The workers carried placards while circling in front of the Centre Block and chanting.

Almost all the 2,500 labor and trades workers in the Ottawa area and 500 mint employees were out today as the Public Service Alliance of Canada began to escalate its series of revolving strikes now in their 10th day.

Meanwhile, blue-collar workers of the general labor and trades group, represented by the PSAC, resumed picket lines outside Toronto post office entrances today, ending a 36-hour truce initiated to sort and deliver government social assistance cheques.

In Victoria, crews aboard the Ministry of Transport vessels which dock at the marine services base on Harbour Road could find themselves running low on food if the picket line around the base continues.

The picket line was set up at the base today for the fifth time since the series of rotating strikes started last week.

PSAC members designated as essential to safety and security and ship crew members reported for work this morning before the picket line was set up, but marine services district manager Larry Slaght reported that commercial trucks delivering both food and maintenance supplies have not been crossing the picket line.

Slaght said there are still enough food stores "to last for awhile, but the working stores would be exhausted" during any long-term dispute.

PSAC picket lines also went up today at Dockyard, Naden, Royal Roads, Belmont Park housing subdivision, Rocky Point ammunition magazine and Ogden Point grain elevator.

Members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, employed in ship repair work at Dockyard, had earlier refused to cross the PSAC picket line, but did report for work this morning.

An armed forces spokesman said there was no great concern.

POLICE NAB JOYRIDERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Tuesday they have broken up a juvenile gang which allegedly took about 60 cars for joyrides over a two-month period.

A spokesman said some of the youngsters had been arrested in December for the same crime, but repeated the offence while the juvenile court was processing their cases.

Three-Year Tax Break Extension

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial governments and agencies will get a three-year extension of a tax break they have enjoyed since 1966 if the government's omnibus tax bill passes unchanged.

A finance department spokesman said Tuesday the break would be granted by an amendment that zipped through the Commons unnoticed Friday with attendance at its usual end-of-the-week low.

The amendment would extend until Dec. 31, 1978, an exemption from a 15-per-cent withholding tax that Ottawa charged prior to 1966 on interest paid by the provinces for money borrowed outside the country.

The exemption was scheduled to end Dec. 31 this year. Finance Minister John Turner said the amendment, a simple change of date, without explanation Friday afternoon and it was approved routinely. MPs apparently unaware of its significance.

The provision, affecting hundreds of millions of dollars in loans annually, allows the provinces to borrow at cheaper rates. (Other tax bill story, see Page 21.)

Gov't Department For Women Only

A new government branch to deal solely with the participation of women in the economy was announced Tuesday by Economic Development Minister Gary Lauck.

The "women's economic rights branch" has been established to "examine, plan and recommend on all issues affecting the economic, social and socio-economic status of women in B.C."

Lauck said he was not suggesting the branch was any total answer to the problems of women but it is a "little modest start" to getting women into the business community and the boardrooms of the province.

The projects of the new branch will be a statistical publication on women in B.C.

and "the monitoring of affirmative action on women's participation within the department of economic development."

Through the branch "women will now have a base from which to influence the economic planning and the quality of life in this province," he said.

"The branch will be consulted to ensure the viewpoint of women is taken into account in all departmental policies and programs and to ensure the provision of support and advice for women in business."

When women try to put the principles of equality into practice their demands are met with "disbelief, resistance and sometimes outright rejection," he said.

"It is now up to all institutions both in the government and the private sector to meet this challenge," said Lauck.

Eileen Caner, a career public servant, will head up the branch, he said, and has already begun her work.

Lauck described Caner as a dedicated and highly qualified civil servant who was working at the lowest level within the department with no opportunity for advancement before the NDP took office. Time after time she was passed up for promotion, he said.

The branch will be staffed by a team of people with backgrounds in economics, statistics, sociology, commerce and related fields and with a history of involvement in the women's movement of B.C.

Premier Barrett has resisted demands by women's groups to form a separate department for women.

Some Victoria businessmen are supplying "loans" to young heroin addicts to purchase drugs in Vancouver, a Victoria woman charged Tuesday.

Carol Haley, president of the Victoria Drug-Concerned Society told a Senate committee in Ottawa the businessmen were using "heavies" to collect their loans and were getting away free because there is nothing illegal in lending money.

"The real criminals are the men who put up the money," she said.

A Victoria police spokesman said today though police have no knowledge of the loan-sharking operation alluded to in Haley's remarks, it could be going on.

"Perhaps she has some information we don't have," Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart said. Haley, of 1817 Newton, was testifying before a committee studying a bill that would lighten penalties for marijuana use.

She said addicts were unanimously opposed to legalizing marijuana and hashish saying they all started with using "soft" drugs.

The mother of five said her oldest son, age 21, was a heroin addict and had started taking drugs at 14, progressing from glue-sniffing to marijuana.

Hempsall Resigns

Leslie Hempsall, associate deputy minister of economic development, has resigned from the provincial government.

In an interview today, Hempsall said he resigned last week in order to go into the consulting business on his own.

Hempsall, 54, was appointed deputy minister of the department in January 1972 under the Social Credit government but was designated associate deputy last year.

Asked if his resignation had anything to do with the "lateral shift," Hempsall said: "Well, it was a downward shift but it had nothing to do with this."

"I was in industry before and now I've had three and a half years in government so now I have enough experience on both sides to go it on my own. I got what I wanted out of it," he said.

Looters by the Hundred Stripped Derailed Freight

THUNDER BAY (CP) — A CNR freight train was looted of flour, fruit and clothing believed to be worth nearly $1 million after it went off the tracks 150 miles east of here two weeks ago, according to the Times-News.

The newspaper says numerous bags of mail and parcels are also missing, and postmasters in two northern Ontario centres have reported empty mail bags found miles from the derailed train.

The newspaper says the goods were carried off over a nine-day period with the estimated participation of nearly 1,000 people. No cause has been determined for the derailment which occurred early Feb. 9.

The eastbound train left the tracks 17 miles east of Longlac, turning over nine carloads of dressed beef, seven cars of dry goods, two mail cars, two cars of fruit and one car containing horses and hogs.

Two express cars and one car carrying two automobiles were also hurled into the bush and snow, and the wreckage splattered over hundreds of yards — was a twisted nightmare when CNR special agent George Root arrived.

He found cars laid on their sides, meat on the ground, horses and hogs dying in the wreckage. Hundreds of crates of fruit had been scattered and thousands of pieces of mail had been buried in every direction.

The crash scene is five miles from the nearest road and, as word of the rail wreckage spread, people began to trickle into the site.

Then, said Root, "it spread like wildfire," with as many as 200 people a day making their way through the bush to raid the rail cars almost at will.

Many of the looters came by snowmobile. Root's call for help brought another CNR official and two Ontario Provincial Police officers from Longlac. Later two other OPP officers from the town of Gerathton came in as relief, but the looting went on.

"People were coming from all over creation — Caramat, Longlac, Kapuskasing, Geraldton — I have never seen anything like it," said Root, who guarded the cars for nine days.

"We tried to keep them away from the train for their own safety. We tried to talk them away. We were running up and down the length of the train trying to keep people away."

"They wouldn't listen to us, they just wanted the meat," Gilbert Ferris, CNR trainmaster at Longlac, at one time saw about a hundred people going through the overturned train cars. "It was a terrible situation. We were not able to control it at all. People wouldn't listen."

He said he did not know of anyone being charged with theft or trespassing.

Another railwayman said it would be difficult to bring a charge of theft that might involve most of the people in a town.

"The jury might smile a lot," he said.

Postal Code Use Lags in City

Victorians are lagging well behind other Canadians in using the new postal code, post office spokesman Buz Sawyer said today.

While the national acceptance rate of the code on a daily basis is 42.8 per cent, the acceptance rate in Victoria is only 27 per cent, Sawyer said.

"And those who don't use

the code are simply getting slower mail service," he said.

Sawyer explained that the first three digits of the six-character code identify the general geographic location of the address — the province, town and section of that town.

The last three digits pinpoint a small section of the city, for example, one side of a city block, an apartment building, an office building or a large business firm.

"This unique postal code was the first major step in our mechanization program," Sawyer said.

Under the program, letter sorting machines will ultimately be installed in the 26 cities across Canada which account for 85 per cent of Canadian mail. In B.C., sorting machines will be installed in Vancouver and Victoria.

Sawyer said a Victoria mail processing plant is in its final planning stage. Target date for completion is October, 1976.

"Mail manually sorted is handled anywhere from six to 20 times, but mail sorted by machines will be handled only about three times.

"It really cuts down on so much time," he said. "But to be machineable, mail must bear the postal code and fit the machine."

The maximum size an envelope can be is six inches by 10 inches, the minimum size is 3½ inches by 5½ inches.

Sawyer said the postal code can also be used very effectively for manual sorting.

"Just looking at the code, we can tell what province, what city and what street the letter is being sent."

There is a postal coding unit in Victoria, he said, and anyone wishing to have their mailing list coded can write Room 203-1230 Government Street, Victoria, V8W 2Y8.

Body Shops Dropping Last of Surcharges

Victoria auto body shops are expected this week to remove the last in a series of surcharges for work done under the provincial Autoplan insurance system.

The members of the Victoria branch of the Automotive Retailers' Association voted in late December to remove the minimum $2 per hour surcharge on the basic work rate of $14 per hour.

"The body shops accepted an offer at that time by the Insurance Corporation of B.C. to do car repair work at $15.50, ending the surcharge which had been in effect in the Victoria area since Oct. 1, 1974.

But until this week, the body shops have been charging a $2.85 per hour surcharge on what is called "remove and replace" work, for example, taking off a fender, then bolting it back on.

Victoria ARA president Dennis Butler said letters have been sent out today to all area body shops urging them to forego the "remove and replace" surcharge.

Butler said the ICBC does not allow any charges for the bolting work and "we still require this money," he said.

"But we found that this hassle was not accomplishing anything for the membership, the ICBC or the public."

The ARA across the province will be looking for further rate increases from the ICBC in May, the date of new union contracts for automotive repair workers and Butler said the lifting of the surcharges in Victoria is "an effort to clear things up before the May rates."

Preclearance From Victoria?

The Victoria International Airport is one of four Canadian air terminals being considered as customs preclearance points for airline passengers.

Other preclearance offices may be established at Calgary, Edmonton and Halifax.

Preclearance is the system under which a passenger flying from Canada to the United States is able to clear U.S. customs at the point of departure.

Customs service at the two Alberta airports could be in operation within a year.

Major expansion of existing facilities at Vancouver and Winnipeg are under study.

Neither Canadian or American spokesmen are willing to estimate when the customs service will be established in Victoria and Halifax.

But both sources stress that demands of traffic must be weighed against the cost of stationing crews of inspectors abroad at a time of economic recession and resultant budget limitations.

Airlines must cover the cost of the physical facilities.

Southern Vancouver Island and lower mainland teachers today marched to the Legislative Buildings to protest what they called inadequate funding for education and government failure to keep its promises.

"Education finance is in a mess," said John Hardy of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation office in Vancouver.

While BCIT officials met with Education Minister Eileen Daily to submit their demands, "alarmed" presidents of teacher associations pressured their MLAs.

Leo Chaland, president of the North Vancouver association, said his district's school board had acted in good faith, believing government promises for extra funds in order to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio.

But Daily told the teachers the education department is definitely freezing the teacher-pupil ratio.

"We didn't feel it was responsible financing to inject another 2,000 teachers into the province's education system," The government's commitment to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio to 17:1 was made in good faith and the program will continue when economic conditions improve, she said.

Chaland said this year's mill rate for education would jump another 12 mills, meaning an extra $100 to $200 to every homeowner.

Chaland said his association was pressuring the government to keep its promise to remove the education tax from property.

Glen Plueckhahn, president of the Nanaimo association, said his area had more pupils per teacher than anywhere else in the province.

In spite of this, Plueckhahn said, to maintain the status quo of education in the Nanaimo area the mill rate will have to be increased 12 mills (about 33 per cent).

Library Budget Approved

Greater Victoria Library Board Tuesday approved a $1,403,897 budget after chopping $150,000 from the provisional figures.

The budget is 10.09 per cent higher than last year but does not include possible salary increases resulting from negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing library employees.

One third of the spending cutbacks were made in the purchase of new books.

This was made possible by the delayed opening of Saanich's Nellie McClung branch, now slated for completion in 1976.

Further budget cuts were made in personnel, furnishings, supplementary programs, and the building and maintenance programs.

The budget now goes to municipal councils for approval.

Up-Island Mayors Steaming At Dayliner Schedule Switch

Vancouver today the new schedule was to have been announced and advertised closer to the start date but an up-island newspaper heard of the change and contacted CP Rail. There will be public announcement of the changes coming, he said.

The Dayliner service, which is operated by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, a subsidiary of CP Rail, has generated a continuing stream of criticism from communities it serves in recent years.

An application to the Canadian Transport Commission by the rail company in 1970 to discontinue the service or have its operating losses subsidized produced stormy hearings in Victoria and led to the CTC ordering the service to be improved and denying a subsidy.

CP Rail has another application currently pending before the CTC. It wants the service reviewed once more to see whether it serves a "useful purpose," should be subsidized or discontinued. The company says its Dayliner losses in 1973 were about $20,000.

The application was filed with the CTC in December but the commission has not yet indicated whether it will hold public hearings again on the question.

Ferguson said today he could not say whether there had been public consultation on the new Dayliner schedule, which he called "somewhat experimental," but he said there has been a consistent public claim the service should be run "the other way," meaning the schedule should be arranged so up-island passengers could have a day in Victoria.

Meanwhile, up-island spokesmen condemned the new timetable.

Courtenay Mayor William Moore said if the subject wasn't so serious, the new schedule would be "hysterically funny."

"Maybe they've become so ridiculous that something will come out of it," he said.

Cumberland Mayor William Moncrief, an outspoken critic of the rail service, said the new schedule is the reverse of what is needed.

He urged experimentation with operating two trains, one northbound and one southbound, crossing near Nanaimo.

Comox Mayor Richard Merrick said "they're giving us a snow job." He said the new timetable makes things worse for Courtenay-Comox residents.

CLINIC, ARENA AND THE MAN HIMSELF

'Nice Gardener' Enjoys Dig

There are some people used to high office (and many used to no office at all) who would be a trifle upset if they were mistaken for the gardener.

But not Major-General George Randolph Pearkes.

It has happened to British Columbia's former lieutenant-governor but he just laughs about it, as he does about most things in life.

In fact, that was where I found him—in the garden (where else) of his almost two-acre mini estate on Tattersall Drive when we got together to chat about New Zealand and Australia and 87th birthdays.

Right here in Victoria we have the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and the G. R. Pearkes Arena and we have the man himself, a sort of legend in his own time. He is 87 today.

G. R. was a Member of Parliament for 15 years and was defence minister in the Diefenbaker government from 1957 to 1961 until he accepted the appointment as lieutenant-governor. He retired from government House in 1968 when he was named "British Columbian of the Year" and had bestowed on him by the premier W. A. C. Bennett the Order of the Dogwood, the province's highest honor.

By then, of course, he was quite used to awards. Shining out among a host of lesser honors are the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order, the Military Cross and the Companion of the Order of Canada. Quite recently, he was made an honorary member of the RCMP veterans' association — G. R. joined the RCMP in 1912 and was stationed in the Yukon until the outbreak of the First World War. While making yet another award in 1968, Governor-General Roland Michener called Pearkes "the most decorated man I know."

The famous Victorian, who thinks soccer is "a fine team game for youngsters" and can be seen regularly at local matches, has no wishes for the rest of his life except "to potter around the garden" and get it looking even better than it does now. And he doesn't particularly want to live to be 100.

We went inside where his Alberta-born wife, Constance Blytha made us coffee and, being as polite as I could, I said I was sorry to take him away from the garden.

"I'm sorry you're taking me away," he said quickly but with a big grin.

George and Blytha Pearkes, who celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in August this year, have just returned from a month's trip Down Under. They visited Fiji, Auckland and Christchurch in N. Z., and Sydney and Canberra in Australia, with several side trips, they loved it. George didn't even find it too tiring either, but felt that a lot of time was wasted, waiting around airports.

"That's enough travel for one year," says G. R. lightly. "I've always wanted to go to South Africa, but I don't suppose I ever will." And then he laughs. "I think I'll settle down now."

Pearkes was born in Watford north of London, England, and curiously his daughter-in-law Joyce (she's married to their son John, a 43-year-old Vancouver lawyer) comes from Watford in Ontario.

The famous Victorian, who thinks soccer is "a fine team game for youngsters" and can be seen regularly at local matches, has no wishes for the rest of his life except "to potter around the garden" and get it looking even better than it does now. And he doesn't particularly want to live to be 100.

"I enjoy life and I'll take it as it comes," he says wisely. "If I live to be 100 then I'll enjoy life till I'm 100." But he says he would like to see his grandsons, 15-year-old Anthony and 13-year-old Timothy, grow up and "get started."

G. R. glances down at pet poddle Binky, who pleading for one of the cookies that went with the coffee, and smiles.

"Once we had a boxer dog called Baron, but I couldn't give him enough exercise. He would run away from Government House and go downtown and terrorize people by stand-

Bawlf to Study Exchange Plan

Victoria Ald. Sam Bawlf was authorized Tuesday by city council to sound out the possibility of a property exchange that would see city-owned land traded for federal holdings in Victoria.

Bawlf recently suggested, with enthusiastic support from council and from Greater Victoria Library Board chairman Ald. Shirley Dowell, that the main Post Office building on Government would be a suitable site for a new central library, when the building is vacated under postal service modernization plans. He is planning to visit Ottawa next month to discuss the library proposal with Public Works Minister Charles Drury, and he told council's caucus meeting Tuesday that it might strengthen Victoria's case if the city could offer some of its own land in exchange.

"It's possible some of our residual Blanshard property (from the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal project) might be suitable for this purpose," he said.

Bawlf said the federal authorities are now carrying out a survey of their accommodation needs in this area "over the long haul," and already are finding an acute shortage of centrally-located land suitable for development. "They have under-built so drastically in the past that they are now leaving about half the space they actually use in the city," he said.

"I think it would be appropriate at this time to submit to the public works minister a formal declaration of our interest in the Post Office building as a possible future library site, and to ask for his co-operation."

"We may have some land somewhere in our inventory that could be part of a trade-off."

Ald. Murray Glazier said any discussions with Ottawa on federal development plans in the city should include the soon-to-be-built federal market services base at Odean Point, and a study of its impact on the James Bay residential area.

STRIKE SCUTTLES DRAMA FESTIVAL

The 35th annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, which was to have opened Friday with a record list of entries, has been indefinitely postponed because of the strike of maintenance workers in Greater Victoria schools.

Possible re-scheduling of the festival for early May has been discussed but this is tentative as many factors, such as availability of adjudicators and other commitments of students and teachers affect the decision.
